Isolationists Assail Plea For Bold Talk By Roosevelt

Wheeler Calls Letter of 170 Leaders a Clear Demand for War

The President's Sunday night radio speech last night became the pivot of a major foreign policy controversy, as isolationist forces resumed pressure for an American peace declaration.

Under immediate fire was the telegram from 170 leading citizens urging the President to do "everything that may be necessary" to insure the defeat of the Axis powers.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, in a statement said, "No one can read that petition without coming to the definite conclusion that this group wants nothing less than a declaration of war."

Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, wife of Senator Clark, of Missouri, and a member of the national committee of the America First Committee, said it was "shocking and disillusioning" to read the names of some college presidents among the signers. She declared many of the signers' names appeared "signed to a petition for immediate declaration of war several months ago."

She called it "incredible" that women of the country will "stand by in silence while men in charge of the well-being of thousands of young men beg the President to do whatever it takes to beat the Axis."

Questioned meanwhile on proposals of some Senators that the United States inquire into the prospects for a negotiated peace, the President said the easiest way to answer was to say that he had no news.

Lehman Urges Speed

His answer was the same when he was asked if that meant he would have some comment later. He said he could not say whether the subject would be touched on in his Sunday night radio address, explaining he would have to boil down into a half hour what he would like to have two hours to say.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, a White House caller, later said a great many people should be made acquainted with the facts as to the urgent need for speeding up arms production for America's needs and to help Great Britain.

Meantime Senator Clark commented that the United States has "thrown away any effective opportunity we've had to be an intermediary (for peace) because of the partiality we've shown between the belligerents. I don't believe anybody would look upon this Administration as an impartial mediator."

Fish Has Confidence

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, predicted "there will be a decided move in the Senate for restitution of real neutrality."

But Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, persistent critic of the President's policies, said with regard to the President's forthcoming speech, that "I am confident he will uphold the definite pledges he gave the American people in the recent campaign, that he would keep this country out of war. The Congress will support President Roosevelt, regardless of partisanship, on all feasible measures short of war, but will not follow him in any short cut to war."

Kelland Hits Propaganda

In New York, the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies repeated, in a statement, that it stands for repeal or modification of "restrictive statutes which hamper this Nation in its freedom of action when it would cooperate with nations defending themselves from attack by nations at war in violation of treaties with the United States."

On the other hand, Clarence Budington Kelland, author, in a statement issued by the No Foreign War Committee, said the people of the United States are "being worked upon adroitly by the printed word, by pictures, by the air waves, to make us accept foreign war when it comes."

'Station P-O-P-P-A Broadcasting'

Round-Robin Phone Hook-up Unites Roosevelts at Yuletide

JAMES, Los Angeles — MRS. BOETTIGER, Seattle — ELLIOTT, Fort Worth — JOHN, Boston

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Dec. 27.—Mrs. John Boettiger, assistant publisher of the Post-Intelligencer, told in her weekly column today how her father, the President of the United States, opened a round-robin telephone connection of the Roosevelt family Christmas morning by booming:

"This is station P-O-P-P-A broadcasting from the White House."

The quip "brought forth such a roar of laughter from the four corners of the U. S. A. that eardrums tingled, and it's a wonder the connection held," she wrote.

"Then," Mrs. Boettiger added, "came my mother's effort to try to talk to all of us individually. 'Now, I want to talk to Jimmy.' Then 'Where's Elliott? I haven't talked to him yet.'

"A terrific tangle ensued when Boston and Seattle tried to exchange a bit of family gossip."

The telephone connection hooked up Washington, D. C.; Seattle, Los Angeles (James), Fort Worth (Elliott), Boston (John).

'In the Army When?' Ask D. C. Guards

Capital Militiamen Expect to Be Called Jan. 6, but Nobody Has Notified Them

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Although its orders for induction January 6 were signed four days ago by President Roosevelt, the 260th Coast Artillery, District National Guard, yesterday had not been notified by the War Department officially that it will go into Federal service on that date.

A board to give the regiment's officers their physical examinations was formed several days ago at the request of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District Guard commander. The board has not yet been able to function, due to lack of orders for induction, though the order was signed by Mr. Roosevelt December 23.

The board was formed under a War Department regulation to alleviate loss of civil jobs by officers who cannot pass the tests, by giving the examinations well in advance of induction.

Officers and men of the regiment employed in Government offices have been pressed by their department heads to give notice so they might be replaced. Without official orders they have been unable to do so. Many in private employment have had to leave their positions or forego the promise of reemployment after discharge from service because of inability to give proper notice.

Families Moved

Opportunities to sublet houses and apartments have been lost because no definite date of vacancy could be set. Some members of the regiment have moved their families into makeshift quarters in order not to lose a chance to sublet.

At least one of the 260th officers gave up his job in November on the strength of a warning order issued then that the regiment would be inducted November 15.

"The War Department," said a high officer of another Guard organization yesterday, "overlooked the fact that we are voluntarily giving up our jobs, our homes and our salaries to perform what we consider to be a patriotic duty."

On the strength of an order from the adjutant general's office dated December 3, the 260th has made its own preparations for induction January 6. It is ready for mobilization overnight; its trucks and guns could be set rolling for camp on 12 hours' notice. Its staff and battery officers have been reshuffled in the interests of highest efficiency. Men eligible for discharge have been let go and intensive recruiting to fill their places is still under way.

While complete physical examinations are not possible, Gen. Cox has ordered chest X-rays and serological tests requiring much time to be made by the regimental surgeon, Maj. Stewart M. Grayson.

Yet not one of the regiment's officers will know if he actually will accompany the regiment to Fort Bliss, Tex., until his physical examination is completed and he is formally inducted into the Army of the United States. That cannot take place until the formal induction order is issued by the War Department.

Duce to Sacrifice Garrison to Gain Time to Make Stand at Tobruk

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Forces Outside Bardia, Dec. 27.—A "sacrifice garrison" of 20,000 Italians stubbornly held this besieged port tonight at the order of Premier Mussolini, while thousands of their comrades threw up additional fortifications for a stronger stand at Tobruk, 50 miles to the west.

Italians captured by the British said Mussolini's order that they be "ready to die" rather than give up Bardia was transmitted by Marshal Graziani, north African commander now at Tobruk.

General Francesco Berti, Bardia commander, noted for his ability to exhort his men to brave deeds, thereupon called on them to rally and redeem the Italian army's prestige by blocking the British advance into Libya.

No Hope of Rescue

Had it not been for Il Duce's order, one officer said, Bardia would have been abandoned shortly after the fall of Salum on December 16.

Some prisoners echoed Rome radio broadcasts that Bardia would be a "second Alcazar," a reference to the 10-week siege of Spain's "west point" at Toledo.

The Italians, however, apparently do not hold the hope that history will repeat itself and the garrison will be rescued as at the Alcazar.

They removed all important military documents and some troops two weeks ago and since then have made no effort to reinforce the garrison except to send large air squadrons daily against the British besiegers.

Moreover, the preparations at Tobruk obviously are designed to form a secondary line of defense if Bardia falls, and the strategy appears to be for the 20,000 beleaguered men to fight for time to complete the task.

The British prepared to renew a withering fire on the pill boxes and dugouts about Bardia while their fliers roamed far to the west in attacks designed to halt Fascist bombers.

Captured Guns Antique

Examination of captured Italian material showed that while the amount brought into Egypt was greater than had been believed, much was of poor quality.

Trucks and certain other machinery were good, but many guns were as much as 50 years old and of some field pieces the British said they "must have been inherited from Garibaldi."

The Italians relied upon mules and horses to pull much of their equipment, and most of their infantry marched. The British forces, on the other hand, were wholly motorized.

A checkup likewise has proved Italian divisions numerically smaller than supposed, 14,000 men instead of 18,000, as once claimed by the Fascist command.

Australia Blames Nazis

Copyright by New York Times

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 27.—Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies today announced that a sea raider, apparently German but disguised with a Japanese name and bearing Japanese colors, heavily shelled the Island of Nauru soon after daybreak, severely damaging buildings and a plant, but without inflicting casualties.

There was no attempt at a landing on the former German territory near the Equator and northeast of the Australian mainland. The ship stood off at some distance and shelled the place and people.

Menzies pointed out that Nauru, with a population of 3,000, of whom 194 are Europeans, is entirely undefended against attack under the terms of the League of Nations mandate by which it is jointly administered by the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand. This forbids establishment of naval or military bases, the erection of fortifications or military training of natives.

These facts were well known to the Axis and removed all justification for the bombardment, which was a greater crime because it was undertaken under the colors of a friendly nation, Menzies declared. He added that in this latest manifestation of German methods of waging war, the world had yet another example of German duplicity and lack of regard for the common decencies of civilized nations which would if possible deepen the disgust with which Nazi Germany is regarded.

Nauru is an oval-shaped atoll 12 miles in circumference and 26 miles south of the equator. Of its area of 5,260 acres, two-thirds are phosphate bearing. The deposits are estimated at 50,000,000 tons. Before 1914 the island was administered as part of German New Guinea. In November, 1914, it surrendered to an Australian cruiser.

Oil in Troubled Waters

Bulletin

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Capt. Eric R. Blomquist of the Standard Oil Tanker Charles Pratt cabled the company's New York office tonight that only two American seamen—and not 22, as originally reported—lost their lives in the sinking of his vessel Dec. 21 off the west African coast.

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 27.—The 8,982-ton tanker Charles Pratt, carrying an American crew of 42, has been sunk with the probable loss of 22 lives, the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey announced tonight.

The ship, owned by the Panama Transport Co., a subsidiary of Standard Oil, flew the flag of Panama.

Company officials assumed the ship must have been near Freetown, a British African possession, where it was due the day it went down.

There was always the possibility, one official said, that other survivors might have been picked up.

The tanker was under the command of Capt. E. R. Blomquist, of Severn, Md.

The presence of American seamen aboard the Charles Pratt, a foreign vessel, was explained in shipping circles by the fact that President Roosevelt's proclamation banning United States nationals and ships from belligerent waters did not designate the waters around Africa, except the Mediterranean, as belligerent.

The Standard Oil offices here said word was received from their London office of the ship's loss on December 21, but no details were given concerning the sinking.

Carrying 5,000,000 gallons of fuel oil, the tanker left Aruba, the Netherlands West Indies, December 5 for Freetown.

The tanker was one of a group owned by Standard Oil that were transferred to foreign registry when the Neutrality Act banned American shipping from belligerent waters.

She was the eighth vessel flying the Panamanian flag sunk since the war started. Several of them were Standard Oil ships.

A Standard Oil official said the Charles Pratt was the first of their lost ships to carry an American crew.

Built in 1918 at Newport News, the Charles Pratt was named for a Standard Oil official. She was 500 feet long and had a beam of 68 feet.

The company announced it was not known which members of the crew were lost. Those aboard included: Capt. Blomquist, R. F. D. 1, box 28, Severn, Md.; Robert E. Evans, second mate, South Norfolk, Va.; Norval Grannberg, 2418 Upton Street, Arlington, Va.; Axel Sorenson, Newport News, Va.; Larry D. Nolland, Newport News, Va., and Arnold Carlson, Norfolk, Va.

Army Will Buy Of Ford, Over Labor Protest

Miss Perkins Upholds Right to Strike on Defense Projects

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Labor's right to strike in defense industries received strong support last night from Labor Secretary Perkins as the War Department announced that a $2,000,000 tank contract with the Ford Motor Co., which has been criticized by labor's defense spokesmen, would be "allowed to stand."

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt told his press conference that the C. I. O. plan to draft the automobile industry for production of 500 pursuit planes a day was receiving serious Administration consideration.

These three whirlwind developments were chalked up in labor circles as two victories and one setback in the struggle of organized labor for fuller "partnership" in defense planning.

Strikes Found on Wane

At the same time, Labor Department experts revealed that the number of man-days lost through strikes this year will probably be the lowest since 1930, and about one-third of the strike idleness last year.

Secretary Perkins, stepping into the heated argument over whether the right to strike should be curbed, made the following statement in answer to a press conference question:

"I do not believe that the right to strike should be abrogated by national defense.

"I do not believe that labor has abused its privileges and I do not believe these privileges will be abused by the American working people."

The War Department decision to allow the Ford contract to stand despite vigorous protests by Sidney Hillman, labor's new member of the four-man defense "high command," excited immediate interest in labor circles.

Record Cited by Hillman

An outcry arose from Hillman, president of the C. I. O. Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, and other labor leaders on November 27 when the Ford contracts for midget scout cars and passenger vehicles were announced.

Hillman contended that the Ford Co. had a bad labor record, citing the fact that there had been a Labor Board finding of unfair labor practices against the company, which Ford has since appealed.

In announcing the overruling of Hillman's protest, the War Department also said it had arranged a $21,965,420 contract to reimburse the Ford Co. for the cost of constructing a new aircraft and engine factory and magnesium casting foundry at Dearborn, Mich.

At his press conference President Roosevelt declined comment on a barrage of questions about defense production and the war.

Asked about a German spokesman's warning to the United States against "warlike acts" in connection with taking over foreign ships in American ports, the President said the United States has no official spokesman.

He said he had never heard of reports that the United States contemplated withdrawing its merchant ships from the Far East.

Adjournment On January 2 Is Agreed On

Session Expires Next Day Automatically And New One Begins

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Congressional leaders last night were tentatively agreed on a plan for adjourning Congress sine die on January 2, the day before this session automatically expires and a new one begins.

Last of three separate attempts to adjourn this lingering Congress, the proposal originating in the Senate was expected to meet no organized opposition.

Reports meanwhile reached the Capitol that the President would deliver his message on the State of the union on Monday, January 6, three days after the new Congress assembles.

The plan would bring the President to the Capitol a few minutes after the House and Senate, meeting in joint session, concluded counting of electoral ballots, last formality of the President's third-term election.

Vice President John Nance Garner is expected to return for the ceremony, and presumably the partners of the first eight years of this Administration would meet for a hail and farewell. The Constitution prescribes that the "President of the Senate" shall open the ballots.

The legislative format of the new session remained undisclosed pending a series of conferences with leaders beginning next week. Senate Majority Leader Barkley may be called to the White House on Monday. Speaker Rayburn, in Texas for the holidays, will return January 1 and probably will be consulted by the President soon after.

The tentative plan is for Congress to assemble as required at noon Friday, January 3, then take a recess until January 6 for the electoral count and the President's message, and then taken another recess until Thursday, January 9. The President's budget message may be submitted on the latter date.

Senate Democrats will caucus on Saturday, January 4, with Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, apparently slated to be elected president pro tem and Senator Lister Hill, majority whip. House Democrats also will caucus for organization purposes, but major House official posts already have been filled.

Battle Rages In Fierce Cold For Klisura

Determined Stand Taken by Italians At Mountain Gateway

By the Associated Press

Athens, Dec. 27.—On snow-bound peaks, Greeks and Italians were locked tonight in a furious battle for Klisura, fiercely defended mountain gateway through which the Hellenes' right flank seeks to fight into Tepelini and on to Valona in a coordinated drive with the coastal left flank.

In the Tepelini area, a government spokesman said tonight, the Fascists had been driven from several villages in battles on the high, cold terrain. Their retreat eastward from Khimara continued, he added, and in that sector the Greeks pressed an uninterrupted advance.

A general headquarters communique claimed the capture of more than 200 prisoners, including some officers, and "many automatic weapons and mortars" in local operations on an unspecified front.

The importance of the Klisura Pass was emphasized by large reinforcements the Italians were reported to have concentrated there. Its capture would open the route to Tepelini, from where a road continues northwestward to Valona, vital Adriatic port toward which the Italians have been falling back under pressure of Greek advances along the Albanian coast.

"Realizing the great importance of the pass," a Greek military advice said, "the Italians concentrated as many forces as they could in their determination to frustrate at any cost the plans of the general staff.

"With each passing day, however, the battle is turning to the advantage of Greek troops."

As the fight raged on an ever-broadening scale, Greek forces to the north were reported to be threatening to cut the highway to Berat, objective in the right flank's encircling movement toward Valona.

Despite fierce resistance and bitter cold, the Greeks claimed to have captured additional prisoners and considerable war material.

U.S.-Eire Ship Idea Brings Nazi Threat

Germans Say They'll Take Steps to Stop Vessels in Convoys

Copyright, 1940, by the New York Times

Berlin, Dec. 27.—Parallel statements in all sections of the German press tonight leave no doubt that should American vessels be employed for shipment of materials to England via neutral Ireland, Germany will take all steps necessary to prevent those ships from reaching their destinations.

It is said in reports from New York that President Roosevelt is contemplating a change in the neutrality law in connection with supplying England with war materials.

The objective of this change, it is further reported, the German press asserts, would be to declare Ireland outside the war zone. It now lies within the zone as defined by America.

War materials for England then, according to what German journalists in New York claim to have heard, would be sent in American convoys to Ireland.

Such reports, according to German editors, are not merely sporadic. They represent, it is said here, efforts of certain quarters "across the ocean" to give aid "to one of the warring powers." And the efforts of the British to increase their tonnage, depleted by the German air force and navy, are, it is said here, "followed with corresponding attention" in the Reich.

Should American vessels be allowed to call at Irish ports, the Germans assert, it would not be because of Ireland but because of Britain, and British ships would transfer the cargoes to their English destination.

Girl Missing 11 Years Visits Family, Then Disappears

Union City, N. J., Dec. 27 (U.P.).—Eleven years ago 12-year-old Dorothy Neuman was sent to a drug store by her mother.

She returned home for Christmas dinner Wednesday, an attractive woman in an expensive fur coat and smartly tailored frock. She stayed until 11 p. m., chatting casually, and then left, without revealing more than that in the years since 1929 she had been living across the Hudson River in New York City.

Before she left she promised to return on her twenty-fourth birthday, next January 30.

The family was "too excited on seeing her to ask what she had been doing," said police who revealed the girl's return. The medicine her mother sent her for on August 29, 1929, was found that night in a hallway outside the Neuman apartment. The family has moved four times since then and its telephone is not listed. No one thought to inquire how Dorothy knew the whereabouts of her family.

Morgenthau, Espil Sign Agreement To Stabilize Peso

In a brief ceremony, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Argentine Ambassador Felipe A. Espil yesterday signed the agreement whereby $50,000,000 of the United States stabilization fund was set aside to promote stability between the dollar and the Argentine peso.

'Can't Draft Me, I'm a King,' Says Chicagoan Who 'Seceded'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 27.—Alexander Reichert perplexed a Federal commission today by announcing he had seceded from the union, declared himself a king and at present was dickering with the State Department for some land where he could reign.

Commissioner Walker continued the case until January 6 to allow him time to check over the law on kings, sovereign immunity, or something.

Reichert, 29, said he was from Lima, Ohio, when arraigned on a charge of failure to register for Selective Service. Asked why he had not registered, he replied he was not a citizen.

"You were born in this country of citizen parents, weren't you?" the commissioner asked.

"Yes," Reichert said, "but I seceded from the United States October 16, 1940, and established the Kingdom of Alexander."

He said he had written to the Secretary of State for a "temporary right of habitation" until he could line up a kingdom to rule over.

Cherry Blossoms Venture Out And Find a Warm Reception

Breaking out the Japanese cherry blossoms and trying the patience of merchants who have overcoats or coal to sell, Washington's December heat wave continued yesterday without sign of abating.

The National Capital Parks office verified reports that some of the East Potomac Park cherry trees are partly in bloom and pansies are showing their faces prematurely. Dogwood and forsythia also are budding.

Lowest temperature yesterday was 50 degrees, which persisted most of the day, and the high reading was 52 at 4 p. m. The same is predicted for today, along with a bit of rain.

Perhaps, park officials theorized yesterday, Presidential inaugurations have an affinity for warm weather. Anyway, the winter to date has been the warmest since 1936-37, when the White House grass grew so fast it had to be cut for the inaugural ceremonies.

It hasn't been necessary yet to give the lawn a winter going over, but authorities think that if the present weather keeps up, the grass will have to be cut by January 20, Inauguration Day.

A MODERN NEW TESTAMENT

Suppose some modern American conversation were translated into medieval Latin and then, from the Latin, into third century Greek. What would become of such a phrase as "He made a hit with her?" Your English Bible was translated from the Latin which in turn was a translation. And George Lamsa claims this accounts for the obscurities, that they were caused by literal translations of colloquial phrases. Mr. Lamsa, a Syrian by birth, speaks Aramaic and is a noted Biblical scholar. So he went back to the oldest Aramaic texts still in existence and translated the New Testament into English, the first English translation ever made direct from the Aramaic. His "The Modern New Testament" is reviewed for Sunday Post readers by book editor Joseph M. Lalley.

3 German Divisions Moved Into Italy

Fully Equipped, Nazis Slipped Over The Brenner Pass

By Daniel T. Brigham

Copyright, 1940, by the New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 27.—Independent information in neutral foreign diplomatic circles here today confirmed reports of large movements of men and material southward through Hungary.

Cautious commentators pointed out that the Danube was frozen over, suggesting this as a possible reason for the considerably heavier train movement.

They said German reports from the Balkans that these shipments were merely of replacements for garrisons returning on furlough would scarcely be likely in view of the military situation.

A new note was added to the confused stories of German troop movements with the information today that since Monday three whole divisions with equipment had crossed the Brenner Pass going into Italy.

Monday's division was reported to have been a motorized division. Tuesday half a division of mountain infantry reportedly went through, with some materiel. Wednesday and Thursday saw another motorized division and the other half of the mountain division pass through as well as considerable mountain artillery.

Snow Snarls Railways

With the reports of movements through Hungary comes information of the disruption of rail schedules owing to the heavy snowfalls and the intense cold.

On the Russian frontiers material and men—reported to have been for a long time in positions a short distance to the rear—have been moved up, it was said.

Confusion still reigns concerning the whereabouts of all German soldiers reported to have poured into Rumania. There are, of course, standard reports of strong garrisons watching the eastern Rumanian frontiers. But isolated and unconfirmed reports from Yugoslavia tell of their being noted at various points along that frontier as well—notably at Timisoara and Craiova, two roadheads which lead into Yugoslavia as well as southward.

Informed circles, however, discounted suggestions that the German high command might be considering taking on the fierce Serbian mountain fighters during the winter, and moreover saw little likelihood of Hitler chancing such a campaign even in the spring since this might involve Turkey.

More Expected in Italy

Concerning arrivals in Italy, foreign military observers here were more inclined to consider them to be the precursors of future larger shipments rather than "technical" advisors arrivings to assist in the coordination of some of the disrupted Italian home defense and production services.

That a mere 60,000 German troops—regardless of the German army's proverbial invincibility due to recent walkovers in other theaters of the war—would suffice to swing the tide of battle into Italy's favor is not held likely, in view of the Duce's admission that he has already 1,200,000 men involved in the various theaters of the war and has some 8,000,000 more available.

Technical intervention might assist, but it is held to be rather late for it to begin.

Wherefore, the inclinations here are rather to regard these 60,000 men as a mere sample of what is coming.

U. S. Supports Censorship of Its Mail by British

By International News Service

The United States Government has tacitly withdrawn its opposition to Britain's consorship of American mail and is now supporting the censoring system by administrative measures "short of war."

Official sources said last night that Britain has established at Bermuda a battalion of 600 censors. Even so, they said, the censoring facilities continue to be swamped.

Attempts of the German Embassy, its consulates and agents to evade the censorship by routing mail via Japan and Siberia to Berlin have been frustrated by a Postoffice Department notice of last October 4, "rescinding an order of the preceding August 29 allowing the forwarding via the Pacific route of ocean mail to Germany and Poland.

Hitler's bombers have changed formal life in London, but not so in the provinces, as Milo M. Thompson and wife learned when they took only slacks, sweaters and tweeds on a country visit.

By Milo M. Thompson

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Dec. 27.—There was a time when one would no more take a week's holiday in England without packing along the "soup and fish" clothes and party frocks than wear a bathing suit in Westminister Abbey.

THOMPSON

But when my wife, Patience, and I, after weeks of wearing duty in London's front line bombproofs and pockmarked streets, decided to seek a few days of recuperative respite in some distant shire, Patience packed up sturdy slacks and sweaters and I took my oldest most comortable tweeds.

We also took along our rations for the current week as a gesture of helpfulness: A joint of mutton, a small package of bacon, a little sack of sugar, six ounces of butter, even a full dozen of eggs to show our whole-souled pleasure at the invitation we had received.

Ours was the war complex and the London habit.

London, except in the night club zone which caters to the city-locked hotel crowd, has put aside most evening entertainments which involve dress.

Instead of entertaining at dinner, when shells will be bursting and bombs falling, one entertains at luncheon.

Late at night one is in one's own shelter or at one's post. Night entertaining usually extends only to such few people as you can put up in your own family shelter—and that, of course, involves no dressing.

Bring Your Own Food

And, in London, when you do accept the hospitality of a friend, you take along your rations as a matter of course. Your host and hostess may have all the money and influence of an Indian rajah, but they'll still have only the ounces of rationed commodities allotted to two, three or four persons, whatever the number in their family.

But, in rural shires, you find England again—the England which always dresses for dinner, makes something like a religious rite of tea and shines resplendently in gala attire when the glasses clink round the evening fire.

"Look!" exclaimed our hostess with a Zazu Pitts gesture of her hands as she viewed our eatables. "They've brought a dozen eggs! And there, beyond the garden hedge, are all those laying hens!"

"You'll never know," said another guest from London, "how much those dozen eggs mean."

She, too, had been up against the business of arguing with provisioner, dairyman and even fishmonger for two or three eggs at a time.

It was while we were chatting in the sitting room before dinner that I began to suspect all was not well with our equipment. I noticed people dropping out of the party to begin to dress. When we, too, retired I suggested to Patience, who was in wool skirt and sweater, that, perhaps, she'd better put on the one dress-up dress she had packed.

"Surely that won't be necessary," she said. "You don't suppose they'd really dress, do you?"

"I'm afraid they will," said I, reaching for the darker of my suits and the only white shirt.

And they did.

A party had been planned for that night. Parties and teas and excursions had been planned for every day, we found.

The wardrobes of those women in the hills, worn on these occasions, were positively amazing. And how Patience regretted the absence of those party costumes she had had no opporunity to wear.

Remote and Gay

The evening festivities were amazing to us. Glasses were filled and music played until long past midnight. There was great singing, too, for we were on the borders of Wales among a singing people. But I am afraid we sat rather drowsily and were none too vivacious in the later hours, long past the time when, wearied of the racket of war, we would have been abed in our London shelter.

We took to dropping out of the daytime activities and taking long walks in the gorgeous autumn forest, filling ourselves with blackberries cold from the season's first frost, which offered themselves all along the hedges bordering the lanes. We drank in the fresh rural air with never a taint of the smoke and dust of London. And we stopped gaily at wayside inns.

They knew about war, these inns, for war had stopped the usual stream of forest hikers and cyclists. One landlady told us she hadn't seen a hiker in two months. She was feeding, instead, refugees from London.

Otherwise it was the old England, the prewar England, the England of the song: "There'll Always Be an England."

If one did not meet truckloads of soldiers on the highroads and sometimes, in the dark, hear the distant rhythmic beat of German plane motors and the sound of far-off anti-aircraft fire, like the whispering memory of a dream of another existence, one could quite forget a war was on.

Nazis Promote Hans Thomsen

By the Associated Press

Germany's ranking diplomat in the United States, Hans Thomsen, has been promoted to Minister of the first class, one grade below that of Ambassador, it was disclosed last night.

Thomsen, counselor of the German Embassy, has served as charge d'affaires since the Ambassador, Hans Dieckhoff, was recalled to Berlin in November, 1938, after the United States brought back its Ambassador, Hugh Wilson, from Germany.

Heavy Raid Ends London's Holiday Respite

Hospital Damaged; Channel Guns Shell Dover for 2 Hours

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 28 (Saturday).—The German air force delivered a short but furious blow at London last night which left no doubt that the tacit Christmas truce in this air war is history.

For some hours flares, then incendiaries and finally heavy bombs fell in district after district.

The "raiders passed" signal sounded an hour before midnight, but in the preceding hours, British sources said, the raid was equal in intensity to some of the heaviest attacks on London.

It was the first sign of bombing London had seen after three strangely quiet nights.

There were casualties—it is not permitted to say how many. Some persons were killed and injured when a public shelter was hit. One woman, pinned under a gas stove with fire burning around her, joked for two hours with the rescue squad that finally got her out. She died a few minutes later.

Reports of damage came in from several areas after the crash of bombs and the thunder of the anti-aircraft had died down.

A London hospital housing 700 patients was damaged by two high-explosive bombs which fell nearby, but no one was hurt.

A building housing an American firm was shaken.

Through it all Londoners carried on, buses and trains continued operation and main thoroughfares were never completely deserted.

While the raid lasted, planes were coming almost continuously over one southeast town, headed for London, and others—presumably British raiders—were heard flying toward the continent.

Fog lay over the Strait of Dover, but the sea itself was calm.

The day had been quiet save for a comparatively minor raid over the home counties surrounding London during which high explosive and fire bombs fell, and a two-and-a-half hour bombardment of the Dover area by big German guns firing across the Channel.

This long shelling was declared to have produced "no damage or casualties."

Meanwhile British pilots, back on day and night bombing assignments after the Christmas truce assaulted the Nazi submarine base at Lorient, France, today and attacked a series of German-held airdromes in French Brittany, it was officially announced here.

It was the second successive day of daylight action by the Royal Air Force, for yesterday and last night the German-held base of Bordeaux, France, and the port of Le Treport were attacked, along with several German air bases.

(Although the British announced that the Germans had bombed the Isle of Sheppey, in the Thames estuary, yesterday, the British action against Bordeaux was declared by authorized Germans not only to have had "no military or practical meaning," but also to have broken the unofficial Christmastide truce.

Germans Disagree

(The German high command asserted that its air force "undertook no war operations against the British Isles on the second Christmas holiday (yesterday)," and added that in the same period the British had caused "losses of dead and wounded" among French civilians.

(D. N. B., the official German news agency, reported that the Royal Air Force also had bombed the French coastal towns of St. Malo, Dinard and Lessay.)

The British Air Ministry announced that the attacks on Bordeaux were centered on an airdrome, and those at Le Treport on shipping.

The British today announced new restrictions on the reexport to neutral Ireland of several vital commodities which have to be brought across the Atlantic in ships protected by British guns.

The board of trade prohibited the export to Ireland without license of cattle feed, fertilizer, manufactured tobacco, oranges, lemons and certain classes of tools. In connection with this new step it was realled that many Britons had declared that because of her refusal to furnish bases for British convoys, Ireland should be deprived of the products of those convoys.

A Netherlands naval officer announced today that several unfinished Netherlands warships brought across the Channel when the Germans invaded the Low Countries last May are being completed in British harbors and would "soon" go into action.

The number of new Dutch warships to go into Britain's service—and they will be supplemented, it was said, with one of the destroyers originally received by Britain in the naval base deal with the United States—was not officially stated.

The Netherlands spokesman, however, said the greater part of the Dutch navy escaped to England at the time of the German invasion and that only three gunboats and two mine layers were lost in action at that time.

In 1939 the authoritative British handbook, Janes' Fighting Ships, reported that the Netherlands had four cruisers afloat, ranging from 3,350 to 6,670 tons, and three under construction, two of the latter being 8,350 tons and the other 3,350 tons.

Aside from this the Netherlands in 1939 had eight destroyers and four building, 12 torpedo boats and 32 building, 21 submarines and 9 building, and 7 gunboats building.

Italian Fleet In Hiding, Say Greek Reports

Main Body Sheltered In Fiume and Pola, Experts Declare

By the United Press

Athens, Dec. 27.—The main body of the Italian fleet has been driven out of the southern Adriatic and has taken shelter in the ports of Fiume and Pola, Greek naval quarters reported tonight.

Blasting a path for the Greek push upon the Adriatic seaport of Valona, British bombers were said in an R. A. F. communique to have smashed warehouses and Italian railroad communications at Krionero just south of Valona, despite strong interference by Fascist fighter planes.

The main force of the Italian fleet in the Adriatic was said to have withdrawn to escape the attacks of British bombing planes.

Only one Italian cruiser and several destroyers were left to cover the Italians' rear-guard action before the fall of Khimara, which the Greeks captured Sunday evening, it was reported.

Greeks said the strongly fortified island of Saseno, just off Valona, has ceased to be Italy's "Gibraltar of the Adriatic" as a result of the sensational exploit of the British Mediterranean fleet, including big battleships, in shelling Valona.

Submarine Tender Beats Schedule By 19 Months

Vallejo, Calif., Dec. 27 (AP).—A $12,000,000 submarine tender, the U. S. S. Fulton, was launched at the Mare Island Navy Yard today, 19 months ahead of schedule.

Mrs. Arthur T. Sutcliff, grandniece of Robert Fulton, who invented the steamboat, was sponsor of the 9,500-ton craft.

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—The former American Export liner Exochorda and two private yachts joined the Navy today in commissioning exercises.

The 9,299-ton Exochorda was renamed the U. S. S. Harry Lee and will serve as a supply ship and submarine chaser. Harold S. Vanderbilt's old yacht Vara was renamed the PC-509. The yacht Savitor, formerly owned by Joseph H. Seaman, was renamed the U. S. S. Emerald and will be used as a sub chaser.

Exports of Planes To Britain Decline

Scarcity of Ships And Nazi Blockade Declared Cause

By the Associated Press

A Commerce Department report disclosed yesterday that aircraft exports declined last month as compared with October, and informed sources explained that Nazi raids on shipping were hampering delivery of American warplanes to England.

The report said all exports of aircraft and parts in November were valued at $26,738,000, compared with $31,389,000 the month previous. The bulk in both months went to Great Britain.

Persons in close touch with aircraft exports said a scarcity of shipping bottoms was a major explanation of the decline.

The Commerce report gave no breakdown of figures, but other sources said that 291 planes were exported in November, aside from engines and spare parts, as compared with 334 in October. Of the November shipments, 241 were destined for England and a number of the remainder were billed to Canada. In October, 279 planes were shipped to England and Canada combined.

Aside from the shipping scarcity, other explanations advanced for the November decline included changes in some models, especially the installation of more guns; weather conditions and shortage of navigating instruments hampering transatlantic flights of long-range bombers to England from Newfoundland.

For December, shipments to Britain were reported on the increase. By one trade estimate, December exports are expected to reach 350 planes, with about 275 destined for Britain.

Two D. C. Teams Reach AZA Debating Finals

An all-Washington final tomorrow was assured when two local teams emerged victorious yesterday in the Aleph Zadik Aleph debating tournament, held at the Raleigh Hotel in connection with the group's regional convention.

Taking the platform in the finals will be Sam Temin and Sol Lynn, representing Simon Atlas Chapter, against Ernest Kipnis and Stanley Love, of Capital City Chapter.

Preliminary winners yesterday in the basketball tournament, another feature of the convention, were the Capital City Chapter, of Washington, and Richmond's Monarch and Commonwealth Chapters. Semi-finals are scheduled tonight and the finals tomorrow afternoon, all games being in the Heurich gymnasium. Admission is free.

The oratory as well as debating finals will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the Raleigh. Survivors in the former tournament, selected Thursday, are Jerry Golomb, of Washington, and Harry Weiner, of Baltimore.

Last night the 260 youths from Maryland, Virginia and the District who are gathered here for the four-day meeting attended Sabbath services at Adas Israel Synagogue, their own members conducting the program. Stanley Rabinowitz, of Des Moines, Iowa, a past national president, was guest speaker.

Society Hails D. C. Man as No. 1 Geologist of '40

Austin, Tex., Dec. 27 (AP).—Seventy-five-year-old Dr. Nelson Horatio Darton, of Washington, D. C., was proclaimed tonight as the Nation's leading geologist for 1940 by the Geological Society of America.

The veteran of 50 years service with the United States Geological Survey was awarded the Penrose medal for distinguished research in pure geology and outstanding original achievements in the geologic sciences.

Dr. Darton is generally credited with originating the science of large-scale contour mapping. He has contributed extensively to the literature and progress of American geology for more than half a century. His geologic works include more than 200 volumes, papers and maps.

Colored Girl, 19, Discovered Dead In Vacant Lot

The body of Cecelia Ford, colored, 19, of 4204 Meade Street Northeast, missing since last Saturday, was found last night on a vacant lot near the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks and Kenilworth Avenue. Police are investigating the possibility of foul play.

Robert and Arcie Pruitt, of 1212 Kenilworth Avenue, found the body while playing baseball on the lot and called the police. The body was identified by Ashby Ford, a sister.

Members of the family said the girl was last seen as she returned from a choir rehearsal Saturday night. She was with a girl companion, who said Cecelia left her to take a short cut home.

Magnesium Lack Perils Plane Output

Acute Shortage Feared by March; 'Rationing' Considered

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Dec. 27.—Along with a threatened shortage in aluminum, aircraft manufacturers assert that a more serious bottleneck is developing in magnesium—the lightest of all metals and essential for aircraft engines.

Private surveys indicate that an acute shortage in this metal may be felt by next March. Already one of two aircraft makers have had to slow down production because of limited magnesium supplies.

The National Defense Advisory Commission has sent out questionnaires to both vendors and users and is giving the matter the closest attention.

Meanwhile, it is felt in some circles that this apparent scarcity in magnesium alloys may prove sufficiently serious to warrant mandatory rationing by the Defense Priorities Board.

Actor Flynn's Yacht Overdue

San Pedro, Calif., Dec. 27 (AP).—The Coast Guard reported today that Movie Actor Errol Flynn's luxurious yacht Sirroco was overdue between here and Honolulu. Flynn is not aboard.

The craft, skippered by William Keil, movie technical director, with six passenger-crewmen, left San Pedro December 17. Severe storms have swept the Pacific for a week.

Red Army Says Belligerents All Lack Oil

Its Shortage Can Determine Outcome, Is Claim

Moscow, Dec. 27.—The Russian army newspaper, Red Star, reported today that an oil shortage is being "felt sharply by all belligerents" in the European war.

Citing the German campaign of 1916 against Rumania as a precedent for a "march to oil," the army publication said:

"The impossibility of carrying on war without fuel makes oil not only an important means of war but also the aim of some special military operations.

"In the second imperialistic war the blockade of a rival's oil supply and occupation of oil deposits is quite an important factor in policy and strategy."

British, German and Italian bombings of oil deposits and refineries were given as examples, although the present situation in Rumania was not cited.

Pravda, official Communist organ, reported plans were under way to increase production in the Soviet's important Baku oil region by the exploitation of resources under the Caspian Sea.

"The further development of military aviation, the growth of navies and the expansion of mechanized armies," the Red Star article said, "are inseparably connected with the increase and expense of oil, the shortage of which already is felt sharply by all belligerents and many neutral countries. The longer the imperialistic war lasts the wider will be the development of operations and the more difficult will be the problem of supplying the war with its main source of energy—oil."

Family Fears for Arlington Man on Tanker Sunk Off Africa

Norval Grannberg May Be Among 22 American Sailors Reported Missing; Word Anxiously Awaited

An Arlington County family last night anxiously waited word of the fate of Norval Grannberg, 34, of 2418 Upton Street, who was one of 42 members of the American crew of the Standard Oil tanker Charles Pratt, which was sunk near Freetown, Africa, December 21.

GRANNBERG

Sinking of the tanker was announced by oil company officials in New York last night, but it was not known which members of the crew among the 22 believed to have been lost.

Greenberg made his home in nearby Virginia with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Seldon Menefee, and his mother, Mrs. Caroline Grannberg, 60, who is a native of Norway. Only last week the family was saddened by news of the death in Seattle of Norval's brother, Lieut. Comdr. Eric Grannberg, U. S. N.

Grannberg, members of the family said, shipped aboard the tanker as an able seaman shortly after Thanksgiving.

BLOMQUIST

Capt. E. R. Blomquist, master of the tanker, lived at Severn, Md., near Annapolis.

In the Blomquist home last night were his wife and four children, Eric Robert Blomquist, jr., 19, seaman also, employed aboard Standard Oil tankers, but on a two-week leave; Richard Henry, 15; Jeanette Virginia, 13, and Juanita Lois, 7.

Mrs. Blomquist told the Associated Press he had a premonition of disaster and "didn't want to go" on the vessel's last voyage.

"I think he had it in his mind when he was leaving that he wasn't coming back," Mrs. Blomquist said. "I could tell it from the way he acted. He didn't want to go, but what could he do? He has been at sea all his life and there's nothing he can do on shore."

Mrs. Blomquist said she last saw her sailor husband when he was home for a visit November 23.

"Maybe daddy's all right," said Jeannette, 13, older of the two daughters. "He might have been saved or injured or something and isn't able to let us know it."

The last word the family received from Capt. Blomquist was Christmas cards mailed from Aruba December 5, the day the tanker sailed.

The Blomquists were married at Baltimore in May, 1919, while he was chief officer on merchant vessels. A native of Sweden and 47 years old, he has been a Standard Oil master since 1921.

17-Billion Budget Reported Drafted

Estimates Said To Include 10 Billion For Arms Program

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt was reported authoritatively last night to have drafted a $17,000,000,000 budget for the coming fiscal year, including $10,000,000,000 for the armament program.

The President was said to have settled major details of the budget shortly after he told reporters at a press conference that Budget Director Harold D. Smith was going to the White House with the latest figures.

The $10,000,000,000 armament estimate was double that of the current year, and easily the largest since World War days. If the Treasury pays out $17,000,000,000 in the fiscal year beginning next July 1, it will be the highest in American history with the single exception of the last year of the World War, when $18,522,895,000 was expended.

Officials indicated that the budget was large enough so that no substantial changes would be needed to take care of the President's proposal to lease war material to Great Britain.

On projected Federal revenues, guesses of officials yesterday ranged all the way from $8,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000. The midway figure of $9,000,000,000 has many supporters.

If this figure should prove correct, the deficit might be $8,000,000,000, also the largest since the last year of the World War, when expenditures exceeded revenues by $13,370,638,000.

However, the President's revenue estimates will be only tentative and based on existing tax laws. The Treasury already has asked for more taxes and Treasury experts have been figuring on at least $1,000,000,000 of additional levies.

Dr. Ruhland Sees No Evidence of Flu Epidemic in D. C.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland last night said his department has started a survey of employes of local industry, department stores and Government absent from work due to respiratory illness but so far had seen no evidence of an epidemic.

"Thus far there has been fewer cases of influenza reported than for the same period last year," he said.

Despite the unseasonable weather in the Capital the number of influenza cases in the city is no higher than in previous years, he stated.

"Fortunately we have nothing to worry about regarding an epidemic," Dr. Ruhland declared.

However, he advised persons with colds to remain home and in bed with a physician's care.

Army Camp Costs Running Far Beyond Estimate

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—William F. Carey, defense commission expert on cantonment construction, said today Army camps being built would exceed their estimates of cost "by millions."

Moreover, he said, it would be necessary to add "a month or six weeks" to estimated construction times.

However, Carey emphasized, there was no "bogging down" of the program and declared that "what has been accomplished is nothing short of a marvelous achievement."

Contract Awarded For 50 Residences At Fort Story

By the Associated Press

The Public Buildings Administration announced yesterday award of a contract to Walter T. Gregory, Norfolk, Va., for construction of 50 one-family houses for married enlisted personnel at Fort Story, Va.

The contract was awarded on a cost plus fixed fee basis. The estimated cost of the project was $163,000, and Gregory will receive an $8,500 fee. Construction must be completed in 125 days.

The houses will be of frame construction containing four rooms and bath with possibly one less room in a few instances.

Food Takes Lion's Share of Budget

Mr. and Mrs. America spent $1,236 with the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker in 1939.

Retail buying by the country's 34,000,000 families in that year amounted to $42,023,818,000, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

Here is the way the money of the average breadwinner was spent:

Food, $310; general merchandise, $176; clothing and shoes, $96; furniture, household wares and radio, 51; automobiles and accessories, $166; filling stations, $83; restaurants and barrooms, $104; building materials and hardware, $80; drug stores and soda fountains, $4; miscellaneous, 124.

Student Union Advocates U.S., Soviet Accord

Opposes Aid to Britain; Asks Help for China

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Dec. 27.—An appeal for cooperation with the Soviet Union and China, opposition to aid for Great Britain, a warning that academic freedom would be defended "with all our strength," and an attack on alleged profit-seeking by college trustees marked the opening today of the sixth annual convention of the American Student Union, which purports to represent 10,000 high school and college students.

In a two-hour report read to the delegates by Herbert Witt, executive secretary of the union, he called for cooperation between the United States, China and the Soviet Union as a possible "guaranty for the preservation of peace and the victory of democracy."

He termed proposed loans to Great Britain as "mortgages" on American lives "to the imperial fortunes of the war in Europe." American ideals, he added, "are not advanced by entrance into war at the behest of and in the interest of those who have an economic stake in nations, colonies and other areas overseas."

Turning to the issue of academic freedom, Witt asserted that a "rapid perversion of curriculum" had arisen, "accompanied by the most widespread onslaught against the integrity of student extracurricular activities in the annals of American education."

Witt implied that wealthy college trustees were using their control of education funds to promote their own interests, adding that "in their educational 'philanthropies,' as in their more obvious business dealings, they want to know what their dollar is going for, they want a voice in determining what the dollar will buy."

The Rapp-Coudert committee investigating subversive activities in the school systems also came under consideration in Mr. Witt's report. He called it a "little Dies" committee and said that it paved the way for "a general assault on academic liberty within the schools" and for "a legislative assault on the educational budget."

'I Am' Organist Says Goddess Inspired Her

Divinity Helped Her In Composing Songs, Cult Witness Swears

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 27.—A former organist for the "I Am" movement testified today that the late Guy W. Ballard, founder of the organization, claimed he composed its songs with the assistance of "an ascended goddess of light."

Mrs. Virginia La Farerra, a Government witness in the trial of Mrs. Edna W. Ballard, widow of the founder; their son, Donald, and eight others on mail fraud charges, testified:

"Mr. Ballard would come to me with a fragment of a theme and I would write the music. He would stay in the room for an hour or so."

The Government introduced a letter, over the signature of St. Germain, an "ascended master," dismissing Mrs. La Farerra from the organization.

Merton J. Casterline, of Cleveland, a former "I Am" student, testified that William J. Cassiere, one of the defendants, told him the "I Am" leaders had come to Cleveland to save the city from a flood which would be caused by an earthquake under Lake Erie.

Casterline said that later, Cassiere told him the purpose of the visit was to accumulate "love gifts."

He testified he heard Mrs. Ballard warn her followers that a "cataclysm" could be expected and that "I Am" students who had securities should sell them, since a major portion of the earth was about to be wiped out.

Casterline said he left the movement when he became convinced its teachings were anti-Christian.

A Government attorney read into the record from the "I Am" book, "The Magic Presence," concerning journeys it said had been made by Guy W. Ballard to Far Eastern cities. He declared the Government would prove Ballard made no such journeys.

Afraid to Register, Alien Tries Suicide

Crandon, Wis., Dec. 27 (AP).—Axel Perkio, an alien from Finland employed as a lumberman, apparently became frightened yesterday as the deadline approached for registration of aliens.

"I never do anything wrong," he said. "I never register."

He then placed a dynamite cap in his mouth and lit the fuse. The explosion splintered his jaw, blew out his teeth and mangled his nose and tongue so badly both had to be amputated today. He may recover.

Bigotry Enemy Of Democracy, Says Hughes

Chief Justice Receives Award of Conference Of Christians, Jews

In one of his rare public statements, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes yesterday declared "rancor and bigotry, racial animosities and intolerance" are the "deadly enemies" of democracy.

The noted jurist made the plea for national unity in accepting a citation from the National Conference of Christians and Jews for his contribution toward improvement of human relations, in a private ceremony at his home, 2223 R Street Northwest.

Those present were Dr. Arthur H. Compton, of Chicago, and Roger W. Straus, New York, cochairmen of the conference; Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, president of the conference, and Basil O'Connor, New York, who represented Prof. Carlton J. H. Hayes, of Columbia University.

In accepting the citation of the organization he helped found in 1928 to promote understanding between Protestants, Catholics and Jews, the Chief Justice said in part:

"Liberty cannot be conserved by majority rule unless the majority hold sacred basic individual rights regardless of race or creed, so that, along with our differences of view, political and religious, we have a deep sense of human dignity and worth and hence of our capacity for friendly cooperation in pursuit of common ideals of justice."

"Rancor and bigotry, racial animosities and intolerance, are wholly incompatible with that cooperation. They are the deadly enemies of true democracy, more deadly than any external force because they undermine the very foundation of democratic effort."

Devoted to National Unity

He continued: "This national conference is devoted to the promotion of national unity—the unity of a free people with that respect for individual rights which makes possible the attainment of common ends. I congratulate the members of the national conference on its notable success in directing the thought of the American people to this essential objective and I trust that in the years before us, with the increasing need for that effort, the conference will have a consistently widening influence."

The text of the citation awarded to the Chief Justice follows:

Charles Evans Hughes is eminent among those whose influence has encouraged American of all religious faiths not to hold aloof from one another but, through conference and cooperation, to sustain the spiritual and ethical standards of the Nation. Advocacy of national unity is among the many services that the Chief Justice of the United States has rendered to his country and to mankind.

Chief Justice Hughes has always exemplified the ideals of justice, understanding, friendliness and cooperation among Protestants, Catholics and Jews. In 1928 he was one of the founders of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He thus contributed of his statesmanship to the creation of machinery for conference and education in interfaith relations.

At this moment in history, when the natural rights of man and the spiritual values treasured by all religious groups are denied in many parts of the world, the American people do well to reaffirm those rights and values and to recognize the support that has been given to their maintenance in America by the championship of Charles Evans Hughes.

Realizing the debt that these United States owe the Chief Justice for his contribution to the improvement of human relations, the National conference hereby designates brotherhood week, the week of Washington's Birthday, 1941, as an occasion when that indebtedness may fittingly be acknowledged.

In token thereof the National Conference of Christians and Jews presents this citation to Charles Evans Hughes.

Watch Night Services in D. C. Churches Tuesday Will Hail Advent of the New Year

Dr. W. S. Abernethy Will Lead Rites At Calvary Church

Keynoted by spiritual resolutions, traditional watch night services in local churches on Tuesday evening will usher in 1941. Sermons and services for tomorrow also will mark the waning old year and the coming new year. Many church social programs are planned.

Calvary Baptist Church's watch night rites will begin at 9 p. m. in Woodward Hall, with the young people conducting a program of music and movies. After a social hour in Burrall Hall, the Rev. Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor, will lead a Communion service in the auditorium, and preach briefly. His subject for tomorrow at 11 a. m. will be "We Finish to Begin."

Young People of St. Paul's Methodist Church, Thirteenth and Crittenden Streets Northwest, will hold a New Year's program tomorrow at 7:15 p. m., with Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington Methodist District, speaking. Young people of the city and friends are invited.

Movies at Foundry

Foundry Methodist watch night rites will be from 11 to 12 o'clock on Tuesday, preceded by the presentation of a "talkie," entitled, "The Saviour Is Born," and an hour of social fellowship in the lecture room. The young people and adult Bible class of Chevy Chase Baptist Church are also holding a program that night.

On New Year's eve, the Scrooby Club of First Congregational Church will give a formal party from 10 until 2, with dancing to the music of a four-piece orchestra, favors and noise makers, and breakfast at 1 a. m. Young and old are invited. Reservations can be made at the church office (NA. 4317).

The Howard Stone Andersons are having open house in their home, 4071 Blagden Terrace Northwest, on New Year's Day from 3 to 6 p. m. A union watch night service for the Bloomingdale churches will be held in the Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol and R Street, Tuesday at 11 p. m. Dr. Chesteen Smith will be the speaker.

Cobbler Models Boyhood Church

PROUD OF HIS HANDIWORK—Frank Federico, 35-year-old proprietor of a shoe repair shop at 2814 Fourteenth Street Northwest, stands near a model of his boyhood church in Italy he built. It has been displayed at his home in Arlington during the holiday season

Presbyterians Plan Welcome For Students

The Westminster League of Central Presbyterian Church will stage a homecoming srevice tomorrow at 5 p. m. with vacationing college students as special guests. The students will describe campus religious life at the Christian Endeavor meeting at 7 p. m.

Dr. Abernethy to Map Program At Area Colleges for Mission

D. C. Federation of Churches Furthers Local Arrangements for Conducting Religious Symposium Here From Feb. 2-9

(This is the fourth in a series of articles about the coming National Christian Mission. Another will appear on January 4.)

By Robert Tate Allan.

Further arrangements for the local phase of the National Christian Mission, including formation of a college and university committee, were announced yesterday by the Washington Federation of Churches.

Dr. Abernethy

Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will head the new unit. He will supervise arrangements for having speakers deliver addresses in each college and university in this area during the Mission, from February 2 to 9, 1941.

At the same time, Dr. W. L. Darby, secretary of the local mission, made public the list of leaders and topics for the daily seminars at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest.

Presiding daily, Monday through Friday, from 2 to 4 p. m., the speakers will include Bishop Paul B. Kern, of the Methodist Church, on "The Bible"; Dr. George W. Richards, former president of the Lancaster (Pa.) Theological Seminary and vice president of the Evangelical and Reformed denomination, on "Personal Faith and Experience," and Mrs. Hilda L. Ives, of Andover-Newton Theological Seminary, "Christian Family Life."

To Discuss 'The Church'

Also Dr. Roy A. Burkhart, of Columbus, Ohio, and Dr. Roy E. Vale, of Indianapolis, both discussing "The Church," one leading the first half of the week and the other the latter half; Dr. Charles T. Holman, of the Chicago University Divinity School, on "Religion and Health." Dr. Worth M. Tippy, former social service secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, "Community Social Relations," and Dr. Adolph Keller, of Geneva, Switzerland, secretary of cooperative Protestant work in Europe, on "World Relations".

Dr. Buschmeyer

Dr. Kellar will lead an additional daily seminary at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church from 4:45 to 6 p. m. for employed folk, with "The Church and the International Situation" as the subject.

Two changes in the personnel of the local Mission have been made public.

Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, has accepted the chairmanship of the high schools committee, succeeding Dr. Arthur P. Wilson, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church, who resigned as committee head because of illness.

Rev. J. L. Mixon Named

The Rev. John L. Mixon, head of the social welfare department of the Churches' Federation, has succeeded Page McK. Etchison as chairman of the seminars committee. Etchison, religious work secretary of the Central "Y," relinquished the chairmanship because of illness.

Dr. Buschmeyer, Mr. Mixon and Dr. Abernethy all have made notable contributions to the religious life of the Nation's Capital. All have experience that qualifies them for their positions on the special committees.

Mr. Mixon

Before coming here about two years ago, the Mount Pleasant pastor served several years as pastor of a Congregational church on the University of New Hampshire campus at Durham. His was the only church serving the 1,600 undergraduates and several hundred townspeople. He came there in 1930 after completing religious studies at the University of Boston.

Since taking over his Federation position here in 1937 Mr. Mixon has developed the department into an active force for assisting the local Protestant churches in their program of Christian social relations. It also serves as a liaison office between the churches and private and public relief agencies. He also has conducted a program for training church social workers. Mr. Mixon was educated at the Chicago University School of Social Service.

Pastor Here 19 Years

Dr. Abernethy, who has served Calvary Church for 19 years, is former president of the Northern Baptist Convention and of the Washington Ministerial Union, and also has held offices in the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Native of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, he was graduated from the University of Minnesota and the University of Chicago Divinity School. His first pastorate was at Berwyn Baptist Church in Chicago—where he served 13 years. From 1912 to 1921 he led the congregation of First Baptist Church, Kansas City, Mo.

Warfare Is Topic

"The Christians' Warfare" has been selected as the sermon theme of the Rev. J. L. S. Holloman for tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Second (colored) Baptist Church, Third Street between H and I Streets Northwest.

"ADESTE, FIDELES"
TRANSLATED BY FREDERICK OAKELEY

O come, all ye faithful, joyful and triumphant,
O come ye, O come ye to Bethlehem;
Come and behold Him, born the King of angels.
O come, let us adore Him.
Christ, the Lord.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Though of doubtful authorship, the writing of this familiar processional is usually attributed to St. Bonaventura, a Franciscan friar, who became a Cardinal. Roman Catholic in origin, whoever its author, it is a hymn qualified to be sung by the Universal Church.

G. W. Offutt, Former Head Of A.B.C., Dies

Prominent Lawyer Will Be Buried at Cedar Hill on Monday

OFFUTT

George Warren Offutt, prominent attorney, former chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and former president of the Washington Board of Trade, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Oswald Hayes, 2322 North Stafford Street, Arlington, Va. He was 56.

Funeral services will be at 11 a. m. Monday at Dumbarton Methodist Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A lifelong resident of Washington, Mr. Offutt was the son of George W. Offutt, well-known Georgetown banker, and Mrs. Gertrude V. Offutt. He was a member of an old Maryland family, descended from William Offutt, who held land near what is now Great Falls, Va., under patent from the Crown of England by the Lords Baltimore.

Mr. Offutt was educated at Western High School, Princeton University, Harvard Law School. He took his LL. D. degree at the latter institution in 1909.

Active in various fields of civic enterprise, he was appointed chairman of the A. B. C. Board February 3, 1934, was reappointed after his 4-year-term, but resigned in March 24, 1939 because of ill health.

He also served as chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council and was active in the Community Chest. A director of the American Automobile Association he wrote much of the District's traffic legislation as well as the so-called "motor responsibility" law, now in force in several States.

Second vice-president of the Realty Appraisal & Title Co., Mr. Offutt was a director of the Potomac Savings Bank of Georgetown and served on the Y. M. C. A. Board of Governors.

He was a member of both District and American Bar Associations, the Society of Natives, Washingtonians, Columbia Historical Society, Georgetown Citizens Association and the Kiwanis, National Union, City, and Manor Clubs. He also was active in the Bethesda Lodge, Lafayette Chapter Royal Arch, Masonic.

Surviving besides Mrs. Hayes are two other daughters, the Misses Mary Gertrude and Nancy Ray Offutt; and a son, George W. Offutt, III.

2 Generals to Get Transfers When Herron Retires

Transfer of two Army officers, in connection with the retirement next March of Lieut. Gen. Charles D. Herron, were announced yesterday by the War Department. Gen. Herron commands the Hawaiian Department.

GEN. HERRON

Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, commanding the First Army Corps, with headquarters at Columbia, S. C., will take command of the Hawaiian Department. He will be succeeded in command of the First Corps by Maj. Gen. Philip B. Peyton, now commanding the Eighth Division, Fort Jackson, S. C. The new commander of the Eighth Division was not announced.

Gen. Herron, a native of Crawfordsville, Ind., was commissioned from the United States Military Academy in 1899. He was chief of staff of the Seventy-eighth Division in the World War and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and the French Legion of Honor. He has served with the War Plans Division of the General Staff here and as executive for Reserve Affairs.

F. Scott Fitzgerald, Novelist, Buried At Rockville

F. Scott Fitzgerald, novelist, was buried yesterday with simple private rites in the Rockville (Md.) Union Cemetery.

His body was brought there following funeral services conducted by the Rev. Raymond P. Black, rector of the Christ Episcopal Church, Rockville, at the Pumphrey Funeral Home.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who wrote many novels of the "jazz era," died Sunday in Hollywood where he was a scenarist. His wife, Zelda Sayre Fitzgerald, survives him.

Mr. Fitzgerald's family came from Rockville, although he was born in St. Paul, Minnesota. He attended Princeton and served overseas in the World War. He was 44.

Mrs. Mutziger Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Memorial services for Mrs. Katherine L. Mutziger, 30, who was injured fatally when struck by an automobile on Baltimore Highway Thursday, will be conducted at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the Church of the Latter-Day Saints, Sixteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest. Elder Ezra T. Benson will conduct the service.

Mrs. Mutziger was a member of the Greenbelt Branch of the Latter-Day Saints. Besides her husband, John G. Mutziger, a University of Maryland professor, and a son, she leaves her father, Richard H. Lundberg, of Ogden, Utah. She was born December 9, 1910, in Salt Lake City.

Rockfall Kills Workman

Christopher Brown, colored, 34, of 208 I Street Southeast, was killed yesterday when he was crushed under a heavy rock at a sewer excavation at Twenty-second and P Streets Northwest.

Legion to Dedicate Post Hall Members Built With Own Hands

CLUB HOUSE—Where Cheverly Legion Post will meet

Materials Collected From White House, McLean Mansion and Many Wrecking Jobs; Opening Set for Christmas Eve

A chunk off the White House and some bits from the McLean Mansion, stone from nine quarries and some wood from the wrecked Queens Chapel Road Bridge have been fitted into the new Cheverly (Md.) American Legion Post clubhouse to be dedicated New Year's Eve.

The gabled stone building, with high stone steps and varicolored slate roof, valued at $80,000, was raised by the post members who pursued for two years every worthwhile wrecking job nearby in successful quest of materials, putting them together into the building with their own hands.

Stone for the walls was gathered during a dynamiting operation in Rock Creek Park; quarries were visited; the subflooring came from a White House wing torn off four years ago; the Queens Chapel Road Bridge gave up the joists for the clubhouse; the furnace and rafters came from the McLean Mansion.

The post has a membership of 40. Among them are electricians, stonemasons, plumbers, carpenters, electrical engineers, someone from every essential trade in the building field.

The building is situated on La Blonde Avenue in Cheverly, Prince Georges County, and is approached through ornamental stone gates and a winding asphalt drive. It contains a large ballroom with an orchestra pit and walls of polished walnut. There is a great stone fireplace.

The designer was Past Commander Nelson G. Tayman, of Cheverly, assistant engineer of bridges for the District. In Sussex, England, in 1927, he saw a house with staggered gables and this architecture is suggested in the Cheverly clubhouse building.

Carl R. Yagle was president of the building committee; Tayman was its vice president; William Petrie, secretary, and Eric Stearns, treasurer. Post officers are Merrit Barton, commander; Charles Kidwell, vice commander, and Donal Wells, adjutant.

D. C. Doctors Give Vitamin C Tests to Students, Jail Inmates

With the cooperation of an equal number of medical students and District Jail inmates, each of whom volunteered small amounts of blood for analysis, two Washington scientists have uncovered some new information about vitamin C.

The findings of Dr. Robert J. Kassan and Dr. Joseph H. Roe, both of George Washington University, were made public yesterday with the appearance of the District Medical Society's "Medical Annals" for December.

Vitamin C is the substance which protects against scurvy and which is contained abundantly in citrus fruits, spinach, fresh strawberries, kale, cabbage and many other vegetables. It was isolated from lemon juice in 1932.

Seeking a satisfactory method of determining the C-intake of normal individuals, the collaborating doctors first obtained the assistance of 50 G. W. U. medical students and the same number of jail inmates. The former were chosen as representing a middle economic group, the latter as a low economic group. All were in sound health.

In one test, the researchers were surprised to find that 14 of the medical students apparently had no vitamin C whatever in their systems. The superficial conclusion would be that these youths had scurvy, or certainly they should have, at any rate.

This particular type of test, however, was known to be fallible and was undertaken more out of curiosity than for any other reason. When the two collaborators made blood level tests, developing their own modification of a procedure reported two years ago by two other scientists, the results were more dependable.

The medical students, it was shown, averaged .76 milligrams of vitamin C per 100 cubic centimeters of blood plasma, compared with a 16 students had a "C" content of 1 teers.

In the former group no less than 16 students had a C content of 1 milligram or more but only a single jail inmate fell in this class. And he, it was explained, ate a dozen oranges weekly—oranges are loaded with vitamin C—which were brought to him from the outside.

Even the volunteers in whom scarcely any "C" was detected were found, by physical examination and case history, to show no signs of scurvy, leading Drs. Kassan and Roe to conclude that this condition merely indicates a poor state of nutrition.

W. G. Lieuallen, Of the Senate Library, Dies

Funeral to Be Monday With Burial In Glenwood

William Grant Lieuallen, first assistant librarian of the Senate, and one of its oldest employes, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital. He was 75.

A native of Missouri, Mr. Lieuallen came to this city in 1897 as an employe in the office of the late Senator Shoup, of Missouri.

He was appointed assistant superintendent of the Senate document room, by President McKinley soon after the latter's inauguration.

He later had served as first assistant librarian of the Senate, and then had been reappointed to that post in a different administration after holding the post of superintendent of the document room.

Mr. Lieuallen was a graduate of the law schools of George Washington and Georgetown Universities. He was a member of the bars of the Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals.

For several years Mr. Lieuallen had been Washington correspondent for a number of Western newspapers.

He was a Scottish Rite Mason, a member of the National Lodge No. 12; F. A. A. M.; Mount Vernon Chapter No. 3, R. A. M., and East Gate Chapter No. 21, Order oof the Eastern Star.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Emily R. Lieuallen, with whom he lived at 1634 Hobart Street Northwest, and a son, William G. Lieuallen, jr.

The funeral will be at 3 p. m. Monday at Hines funeral home. The Rev. Orris Robinson, of Calvary Methodist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery, with the National Lodge of Masons officiating.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Capital Artists' Bureau presents Lawrence Whisonant, barytone (Mary L. Europe, accompanist), and Thomas Kerr, pianist, Friday night in Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church.

Lawrence Whisonant, a young barytone studying at Howard University for his musical degree, and Thomas Kerr, a professor of piano at Knoxville College, who also studied at Howard for a short time before winning his degrees at the Eastman School, gave a joint recital last evening in Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church and were well received by an audience sizable for a rainy night.

BROWN

Mr. Whisonant, who has a good command of languages, sang arias by Handel, Scarlatti, Lully and Gounod, a group of Brahms lieder and songs by Forsyth, McGimsey, Emmett Kennedy, Cecil Cohen, Coleridge Taylor and Horsman. The clarity of his diction and the intelligence of his phrasing indicated that he knows more of German, French and Italian than the memorized texts. His musical instinct was evident in rhythmic surety and in the treatment of phrases.

While he sang against the disadvantage of overloud accompaniments on a piano brilliantly voiced for the benefit of his colleague, he displayed a promising talent. His voice has resonance, flexibility and agreeable timbre, and he uses it with good emotional shading. Its qualities do not yet show to the best advantage, however, because he does not focus it directly on the tone. The resultant haziness is not a fault of intonation but of technical application.

Mr. Kerr disclosed facile technique and dynamic variety in his pianism. He has fleetness, dexterity and accuracy at his command, and his rhythmic sense is subtle. In the matter of one-coloring, he does himself injustice by his neglect of the nuances of pedaling. Many passages that his touch could have clarified were blurred by the pedal work.

He began with Leopold Godovski's arrangements of Corelli's "Christmas Pastorale" and a gigue by Loeilly, and proceeded to an effective reading of Chopin's B minor sonata. In his second group were combined John Ireland's clever "Ragamuffin," Rakhmaninov's finger-tangling arabesques of Kreisler's "Liebesleid," and Stravinski's F sharp minor etude. He opened his closing group with his own "Scherzo Moderne," a composition interesting for its thematic incisiveness, harmonic pungency and structurel neatness. This was followed by Skryabin's B major prelude and Griffes' "Scherzo Bacchanale."

Six Children and Grandfather Perish in Maryland Blaze

Six colored children and their grandfather burned to death last night while a father suffered severe burns saving his youngest child, a 14-months-old girl, from a fire that destroyed their home at Dowells, Md., near Solomons Island.

Involved in the tragedy, said to have been caused by an over-heated cnimney, were all members of the LeRoy Bean family, except three.

The dead were Louis Bean, father of LeRoy Bean, and six of LeRoy's children, who range in age from 2 to 12 years. Their names were not immediately available.

LeRoy Bean was treated at Prince Frederick Hospital for burns to both arms and his face. The baby was attended by Dr. Cloyd Coster.

Dr. Coster said the fire broke out about 9 p. m. It swept through the small home quickly, leaving it in ruins. He arrived as the father was bringing his little girl out of the flames. The doctor said he was able to treat the girl, but had the father sent to the hospital.

Another witness, Rupert Lore, reported that LeRoy Bean, a storekeeper, came home to find his house ablaze, with seven occupants inside, apparently sound asleep.

Bean's wife and three other Bean children were attending a movie when the fire occurred.

Holiday Tragedies

The rain of bombs over England and western Europe ceased on Christmas Day, but slaughter on the highways of the United States was stepped up manyfold. It is particularly ironic that this day of peace on earth, good will to men, should have been the occasion for approximately 420 violent deaths in a country not at war, while Europe's major battlefield was quiet.

Five deaths are charged against holiday traffic accidents in Washington and vicinity. There may be some significance in the fact that only one of these fatal crashes occurred in the District. The Capital has improved its safety record during the last year in spite of its rapid growth. The number of fatal accidents has been substantially reduced in comparison with the figures of a few years ago. Vigilance on the part of law enforcement officials and better cooperation by the public have had a salutary effect, but the record suggests that recklessness ran riot in the suburbs over the holiday.

A probable increase in traffic during hours known to be dangerous for driving is not sufficient to explain this needless sacrifice of life. It appears also to involve greater heedlessness on the part of the public at a time when the Golden Rule is being exemplified in so many other activities.

Nation And State

Every American who is watching the month-to-month evolution of our Government knows that far-reaching changes are taking place and that foremost among these is the centralization of power in Washington. Unquestionably this trend is in keeping with the times. In a chaotic world a strong national government with ample emergency powers appears to be a necessity. It does not follow, however, that hope of preserving our Federal system should be abandoned.

Many of the powers assumed by the Federal Government in recent years must continue to be exercised by it. As Senator O'Mahoney recently pointed out, business operates on an increasingly national scale. The necessity for national regulations to cope with the activities of far-flung corporations is generally recognized. But the inability of the Federal Government satisfactorily to control local problems closely touching the lives of the people has also been demonstrated. Our task is to devise a better working relationship between the States and the central Government that will preserve the advantages of the Federal system without weakening the Nation as a unit.

Two decisions handed down by the Supreme Court recently point to the need for a comprehensive approach to this problem. In one case the court used its "commerce powers" to extend Federal control over a stream that carries no commerce and has never been navigable in fact. In another case the court upheld a Wisconsin statute imposing a tax on dividends declared and paid by a company doing business in many States. That tax was limited to dividends "paid out of income derived from business transacted and property located within the State of Wisconsin." But a strong minority opinion pointed out that a State cannot reach beyond its borders to tax the disbursement of dividends by corporations organized in other States. This rule should not be upset, the minority contended, by judicial disguisement of the tax on dividends as "a supplementary income tax."

The latter case serves to emphasize the fact that the problem in question is not merely one of curbing Federal encroachments upon the States. In many instances the States have set up trade barriers against their neighbors in defiance of the spirit and in some cases the letter of the Constitution. Others are using their taxing powers so as to discriminate against business interests in other States. The North Carolina statute invalidated by the Supreme Court recently is a good example of this restrictive tax legislation. Such legal entanglements tend to undermine our Federal system no less effectively than the continued extension of national power at Washington.

Fortunately, the Council of State Governments is doing some good work in razing spite fences erected by the States. No action by the States alone, however, will go to the root of the problem. Federal and State cooperation will be necessary. The first step should be, as former Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson noted several months ago, an exhaustive factual investigation. A committee assigned to this task would find much valuable information already assembled by the Temporary National Economic Committee and other agencies. Still the fact-finding bodies would have the immense task of assembling material and working out recommendations as to what the respective fields of the national and State governments should be under present circumstances.

There is nothing in the present emergency to require postponement of such a study. On the contrary, the problem is likely to become more acute during the next few years, and in any event an undertaking of this sort might require a number of years before legislation or a possible amendment to the Constitution could be proposed for public discussion.

Completing A Policy

The issue of our connection with the war has now been boiled down to four propositions which furnish the working papers, so to say, of our foreign policy. They are: First, a Nazi defeat is an American interest; secondly, aid to Britain is the most economical method of insuring a Nazi defeat; thirdly, the crisis of the war will come by the spring; and, fourthly, aid from our own productive resources will not be sufficient to count in that crisis.

This fourth proposition is no reflection on the new defense setup under the direction of Mr. Knudsen. But Mr. Knudsen is no miracle worker. No matter how much authority he has got, he can't just press a button and bring into existence engines, planes, ships, machine tools, tanks, trucks, guns, and the remainder of the unfilled orders for Britain. He can ask industry, as he has, to do the impossible. And industry, which is no laggard in cooperation, and which respects Mr. Knudsen, will respond. But the industrial process takes time. And there is no time, granted that the crisis is due in the spring, to make and consign to Britain the materials that would provide a decisive contribution to Britain's immediate problem of defense.

Take the two great requirements of airplane engines and ships. The expansion of the defense-plus-aid-to-Britain program has brought the automobile industry into the business of making airplane engines. Packard is working on an order; Ford on another; and more contracts are due for early announcement. But the experts say there is no possibility of any of these companies getting into production for a twelvemonth. Mr. Walter P. Reuther, director of the General Motors department of the U. A. W. A., contends that the unused capacity of the automobile industry could be regeared to turn out in quantity a standard airplane complete at the end of six months. Mr. Reuther's time limit has aroused the liveliest controversy, but the point in our present contention is that six months is too late for the spring crisis.

The building of new ships in replacement of British losses likewise would take so much time that shipbuilding must be dismissed as a contribution to the necessities of the immediate situation. Not for twelve months will Britain see one of the ships she has just ordered from American yards. It is said that on Sunday the President may advance a shipbuilding program on World War I model. It would be a program long overdue, as at present we have 84 slipways in 23 yards, compared with 1,099 slipways in 233 yards in 1918. Clearly there is room for expansion in an item which is fundamental in any handling of our declared emergency. And yet, even if we decide to mass-produce wooden ships, it is doubtful whether we could launch any of them within six months.

Accordingly our four propositions are incomplete syllogistically as a foreign policy. The conclusion is that:

> Therefore, we must turn over to the British enough of our existing stocks of war material to tide them over the spring crisis.

At the head of the list is the shipping of our own and of the captive countries which is laid up in our ports. The British are particularly "covetous" (to use Mr. Ronald H. Cross's word) of the fleet of 43 Danish ships with a tonnage equal to half a month of Britain's maritime losses. There is even more tonnage available in our idle freighters. There should be no delay in sending at least our own spare vessels to the beleaguered British, and anything else that the British require urgently, while we are engaged in speeding up our long-run building program. Only in that way will our national policy add up and make sense in the light of the premises upon which we are working.

The Second Reader

With what is certainly a just and reasonable pride, the editors of the Readers' Digest announce that their publication has now a larger circulation than any other, leaving aside such things as the big mail order catalogues and the Manhattan telephone directory. Counting the British Empire edition and the new "Selecciones del Readers' Digest" for the Spanish-speaking world, a net circulation figure of 4,100,000 is now reported. There are even special editions of the Readers' Digest for the blind; one in Braille for those who can read with their fingers; another in the form of phonograph discs for those who can only listen.

The editors modestly offer no explanation of this astonishing popularity of their product. Any possible explanation must, of course, award them much of the credit for it. But there are other magazines that are also edited with great diligence and skill, yet have not attained anything like a circulation of 4,000,000 in less than 20 years. Nor can the whole answer be that the Readers' Digest has found favor with all those who have neither time nor patience "to plow through" all the current publications. Among the 4,000,000 devotees must not only be many who have abundant time for reading, but also many, such as invalids, for whom an intellectual activity like reading is the only possible activity. And they must include, besides, a great many of those readers whose profound appetite for printed words has made possible the revival of the 1,000-page historical romance.

So perhaps what we really like about the Readers' Digest is the feeling that its contents are somehow "certified," that the reprinted articles have, like the book club selections, been tested by wiser and smarter heads than our own. Even when it comes to the classics, we prefer to be told which hundred of them are most deserving of our study. This conviction of ours that somebody else, especially somebody with a title, must necessarily know better than we can know ourselves what is good for us, is evidently a national characteristic. Or possibly it is another example of what the Freudians call "the projection of the Father Image."

Farm Prices

The domestic demand for farm products is improving as a result of the stimulus of the defense program. But there is little likelihood of any sharp advance in agricultural prices unless a general inflationary price advance should get under way. For, unlike World War I, when extraordinary demands created conditions of scarcity, the present war for a variety of reasons has caused unsalable surpluses of certain important crops to be piled on top of surpluses. Conditions of supply, moreover, have lost their direct link with prices. This is because of the artificial character of the price structure. For instance, last week's announcement that the 1940 wheat harvest had proved to be larger than expected was only momentarily disturbing, because a large percentage of the wheat crop is now held by the Government under price-sustaining loan contracts. Similarly large quantities of cotton have been added to Government holdings as security for loans, and the same situation holds for corn, too.

This situation, of course, arises from the New Deal. The policy of raising domestic prices by means of acreage curtailment and price supporting loans had boosted the prices of our chief export crops well above world levels before the outbreak of war. The war has merely aggravated the export problems resulting from these price disparities. At present, even if European markets were open to us, the export indemnity required to move wheat from Pacific and Gulf ports to Europe would be about 26 or 27 cents per bushel, according to the Department of Agriculture. Under present conditions, therefore, there is virtually no danger of inflationary advances in the prices of farm products. Should such a movement get under way, the Government would only need to release some of its stored surpluses in order to prick the inflationary balloon.

However, if an uncontrollable inflationary rise were to occur in the prices of goods bought by farmers, demands would undoubtedly be made for more subsidies, more parity payments, more price bolstering loans to offset the loss of farm purchasing power. So, to all the other evils of inflation, would be added the special troubles created by a decline in farm purchasing power in relation to other groups in the community. The vain effort to achieve parity prices for farmers has already cost the taxpayers a great deal of money, and it is much to be hoped that the measure of improvement so far achieved will not be lost as the result of an increase in living costs leading to more expensive experimentation with farm prices.

A Great Showman

No nation can be accounted great which develops only the material side of its life, and it is to such men as Daniel Frohman, dead in New York at 89, that we must attribute the preeminence which a power-laden America has attained in the world of art. No man did more than he to bring New York into leadership as the world's theatrical capital. In his pioneering days he sought his models abroad and brought to Broadway plays and actors of all nationalities, though he was no slavish imitator when the foundation had been laid for an indigenous theater movement. He had an unerring sense of the theater and seldom went wrong in his appraisals, whether of scripts or his choices for the major roles. Uncle Dan he had been called for 60 years on Broadway, and New York's famous street will be inseparably associated with his memory.

FIRST YEAR

Speak softly in this room. Slowly, tenderly,
Not to arouse his unaccustomed ears.
Too soon the words of anger, the wild words of love,
Will make him know the meaning of his tears.

Safely against the world a little while—
Speak softly here, and let the gentle words
Teach him the precious meaning of his smile.

"We Must Fight"

Whenever I hear or read these "we must fight" opinions, I cannot but wonder whether the logic in support of those opinions was derived from the Creator, or from the same source that impelled Herr Hitler to tell the young Germans: "We must fight."

If it was derived from the former, then I must have a distorted conception of the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," and if from the latter, then I do not clearly understand what is to be gained by fighting one's own self.

Your editorial, "The Will to Believe," should go a long way in the substitution of intelligence for ignorance. That is the kind of thought that the people need, rather than all this prejudiced and true-to-pattern stuff that is being carried in so many of our large daily papers. I may be entirely wrong, but I sometimes feel that the most effective way internally to battle both communism and totalitarianism is to try and show them the fallacies of force.

No Inaugural Pomp

I agree with Mr. S. M. Thomas of Oakland, Calif., in urging the President to forego the pomp and ceremony of a third inaugural, and use that money for the needy and for defense. The President is continually urging us to sacrifice for defense. Turn about is fair play. Let him do a little sacrificing.

Would Lift Blockade

A barbarous and inhuman England refuses to permit the passage of food and medicine to the suffering European countries. This "civilized" nation refuses on the basis that the food and medicine will fall into the hands of the Nazis. Past experiences of the Red Cross in Poland disproves this contention.

It is no wonder that the German people turn away from England as their succor despite their suffering under the megalomaniac Hitler. Nor can the erstwhile Allies of England, such as France, Belgium, Holland, Norway and Poland have much to expect from England. The persecuted and distressed peoples of the world have to look elsewhere.

We Americans are told by England to supply her with all the materials of war under the threat that unless we comply England will not protect us. Well, here is one American that wants no protection from England after the manner in which she has betrayed her former Allies. We have a job to do of building our own defenses and that means keeping our war materials here and using them against any enemy that attacks us in America. We also cannot let the cries of suffering peoples go unheeded. I say, "Lift England's embargo against humanity! Send food and medicine to those nations in need."

The Traffic-Court Problem

I have read with much interest the series of articles by your traffic reporter, Mr. Howard Wentworth. Although I do not agree in every respect with the conclusions drawn, I commend Mr. Wentworth and The Post for their sincere efforts to bring about improved traffic conditions in the District of Columbia. Full publicity to the various aspects of the traffic problem is in the public interest. All of us recognize that traffic constitutes a major problem and demands constant and diligent efforts on the part of our public officials and a willingness to cooperate on the part of the motorist and pedestrian.

It seems to me that Mr. Wentworth's facts and figures reveal beyond a question of doubt that the present system of rotation of the judges at Police Court is not the cause of any traffic ills confronting us. I agree that it may make interesting reading to denounce some judges and condemn any system in operation, but unless proper deductions are drawn, the value to the public is greatly minimized.

The District Bar Association has advanced the logical solution to the problem, as reported in your paper recently. What this worthy organization asserts is needed, and I am sorry to say that The Post editorials have to date not agreed, is the appointment of an additional judge at Police Court. Five judges working together in a spirit of mutual cooperation could keep the traffic and jury courts current for all practical purposes. It is astonishing to me, and must be to any other persons who have visited Police and Traffic Court, that the present judges are able to keep the docket at its present level in view of the thousands of cases they are called upon to handle. As the Bar Association pointed out, the size of the court has remained unchanged while the volume of business has increased manyfold in recent years. Hats off to our judges for their untiring and efficient work.

Mr. Wentworth cites cases showing where they have been continued a number of times and then proceeds to lay the blame on the system of rotation of judges. How in high heaven this can have the least influence on the situation is beyond my comprehension. I ask you, would or could a permanent traffic court judge reduce the number of traffic cases without additional help? The answer is no. All of the cases cited by your reporter are jury traffic cases and the only way to do away with unnecessary continuances is to establish another jury court so that there will be in session at all times two jury courts. Give the Police Court another judge and there no longer will be unwarranted delays in the trial of cases.

Your reporter does not point out that in the traffic branch of Police Court, which handles the lesser offenses and where they would have the permanent traffic judge, the docket is absolutely current. No cases are cited to show the contrary. I do not doubt that there may be one or two cases pending in this court, but only because the witnesses are in the hospital recovering from their injuries. So, it is obvious that the rotation system is working out very well in this and other branches of the court. It is only when the more serious cases are transferred, and properly so, to jury court that we encounter the problem of congestion.

I have observed over a period of years that the Police Court judges help out each other with cases when one or more of the judges finish before the others. In fact, this court has followed this practice long before any other court adopted any such plan.

Church And Democracy

Your editorial of December 25 on "Advent" stands out as significant of the more modern attitude of the secular press to Christian thought. Many readers will appreciate your fine distinctions and the undertone of hope for the world in the Babe of Bethlehem.

We are not entering the Dark Ages again, however. We are undergoing morally one of those throes which the physical world experienced when it was being prepared for man's advent. No one nation can claim it is wholly right and another wholly wrong. There is enough of evil in the best of us and enough of good in the worst of us to keep sane people modest in their claims of unadulterated righteousness for some nations and in their justification of uncompromising denunciation of other nations.

This, however, does not justify us in not taking sides with the right and condoning the wrong. The present conflict, begun in Europe and promising to spread to the limits of the earth, is proving to be a test of sincerity, courage, tolerance—in fact, everything that identifies itself under the general term of "right"; as against falsehood, boastful cowardice, make believe, superstition used to enslave the weak in mind, and intolerance masked in robes of world-sympathy. A showdown is inevitable which will justify the moral upheaval we are now experiencing. The much-talked of "new order" will not prove to be what many who use that phrase hope it will be. If the state needs the true spirit of democracy, such as will mean right to think, act and live as freemen, the church must also cease to relegate to itself, in any of its various branches, the claim to be the supreme authority. Democracy begins with the church. If it is to lead, then it must show that toleration it asks of the nations to show toward each other. I have long believed that when the church, in its various branches, shows true tolerance and the spirit of true unity, it can then preach tolerance and unity to the various nations. If signs do not fail, the present world crisis is driving the church, of whatever name, to see this long-neglected duty.

Strength Of America

We are constantly being reminded that the British Navy is our first line of defense and that if Britain goes down we will accompany her, or at least be permanently disabled.

Certainly this Nation was not built upon any such supposition of defeatism. Today we are the wealthiest, most powerful country on earth, capable of meeting and mastering any adverse situation, even if compelled to carry on alone. Our system of government was built on courage, not cowardice.

Early America, faced with innumerable obstacles, by degrees rose to a peak of power and accomplished as much without aid from others. Admitting that the British Navy provides a great measure of defense, it nevertheless amounts to unadulterated weakness even to suggest that our great Nation, blessed with incalculable resources, cannot survive without British assistance.

Not so long ago, a retired American general bluntly stated that we are not fit to survive if we are compelled to rely upon outside aid.

Conflicting Decisions

"It is difficult to reconcile this clear-cut and positive decision with some other opinions the court has handed down recently. Last week it upheld a Wisconsin statute imposing a tax on dividends paid from earnings in Wisconsin, even though the company in question operates in many States."

Thank you for the preceding statement in your editorial "A Barrier Goes Down" in The Post of Dec. 25. This was the first thing I thought of when I read the North Carolina decision of the Supreme Court.

Personally I find the Wisconsin statute much more of an unjust tax than the one in question in North Carolina and I'm at a loss to understand how the court is going to reconcile the two decisions. After all, the latter State taxes for doing business in North Carolina only. The other seems to tax business in all sister States as the price of going to Wisconsin.

On Being Hit In the Nose

IT'S FUNNY. You run head on into a Mack truck and get your skull done up in a gauze sling with plumbing and all your friends will break their legs to prove that your recovery is quite the most important thing in the world, but just let some guy bust you on the nose and all you get are a lot of sly glances that say: "Fighting? And you got the worst of it, too. Shame, shame!" You can almost hear them clicking their tongues.

I know, because I just got hit on the nose. My friends don't ask: "How you feeling?" Instead, they invariably come up with this: "What'd you let him do it for?"

That one stymies me. What'd I let him do it for? I can't rightly say. I saw the fist coming, and it looked like a country ham, and after it was all over I'd have sworn if I hadn't seen it that somebody rang in a crowbar on me.

Blood flew everywhere when his first connected, and after the festivities were over I rushed back to a sink, and a fellow worker cautioned me about getting blood all over my clothes and I told him to hell with the clothes, that my nose was the most important thing and would he please see if it was broken. He lined his sights up on it and we'd twist it this way and that, and he'd ask, "Feel anything?" I said no, I didn't feel anything, and he studied over the matter for about five minutes and then announced: "By God, that's a broken nose if ever I saw one!" I said, "You ever see many broken noses?" And he replied, "Dozens. Dozens of 'em." He sounded as though he made a career out of looking at broken noses.

When the flow of blood had been stopped, my colleague asked: "What'd you let him do it for?"

It was the first time I'd heard that question, and it took me by surprise. What'd I let him do it for? Now, I asked myself, does that question make sense? What'd I let him do it for? Normally, I'm just a tiny bit below average on the uptake, but this query completely floored me. I just ignored him, but I made a mental note to take this question under consideration and see if I couldn't work up a good, sharp, fast answer.

I went back to the desk, and in a few minutes the night side started coming in. Just about the time the office was full, a linotype operator rushed in with his tongue hanging out and shouted, "Omigosh, what happened out back? Somebody stick a hog?" He said that blood was all over the place.

I figured I might as well get it over with. A slight scuffle, I explained, nothing serious. "But the blood?" — the linotype operator wouldn't be put off. "Oh, the blood," I said, and he said, "Yes, the blood." He was going to get his pound of flesh, make no mistake about that. So I came out with it, real quick. I got hit on the nose, I said, just a glancing blow, and it bled a little. I said, "We just got a bulletin here. Petain has kicked out Laval. Looks like the old man's got more iron in his blood—," but it wasn't hot enough to turn the trail.

"You got hit on the nose?" The linotype operator's face was wreathed in mock horror.

And then, and so help me I'm telling the truth, everybody chimed in: "What'd you let him do it for?" I shrugged my shoulders. "Just one of those things," I said, in what I thought was a devil-may-care attitude, but it didn't take. One by one they drifted out into the back to talk the situation over, and I figured I'd better think up an answer to that question fast or else leave town.

So I thought the matter over. I could be facetious about the thing, and say I just let him hit me because there's nothing I like better than getting hit on the nose, but that didn't sound very funny and certainly it wasn't convincing.

Or I could say, "Ha, ha, you should see the other guy," but that wouldn't work either because he was in plain evidence every day and he had never looked healthier in his life.

About that time the boss came limping in. I said, "What're you limping for?" And he said, "We flushed a couple birds over in the other field and when I climbed the fence I wasn't looking and stepped into a hole on the other side and—good lord, where'd all the blood come from?"

I told him, quickly and painlessly, and you know what he asked me? Without blinking an eye, he inquired: "What'd you let him do it for?"

I've tried to figure it out: I've tried to tear the question down into small pieces and analyze each bit, but I'm not getting anywhere with the problem. "What'd you let him do it for?" It hits me something like, "How long is a piece of string, and why?"

It's got to a point where this thing threatens to darken my days, and I've almost given up. But I figure there must be lots of guys who've been hit on the nose and, human nature being what it is, they must have had the same question put to them. What I want to know is this: Is there an answer, and if so, what is it?

I need to know, bad.

Special Loyalty

By Mark Sullivan

Peril For Legislative Bodies

A NOVEL currently popular is entitled "For Whom the Bell Tolls." This is taken from a longer passage, in the quaint sixteenth century English of John Donne:

"For whom the bell tolls. It tolls for thee. No man is an iland, intire of itselfe; every man is a peace of the continent, a part of the maine . . . Therefore, never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee."

That is beautiful and solemn truth. For most of us, however, it is too general, too inclusive, to make us feel the personal poignance that is in it. For many of us, to see himself as a member of the human race, to feel kinship to all, is beyond the scope of our imagination or our sensitiveness. A fellowship spread so thin eludes our consciousness.

BUT IF NARROWED, we can see it. Each of us is a member of many. Each is one of a family of parents and children, and of a broader family of cousins. Each is a member of a group of friends, large or small. Each is a member of a neighborhood, of a church, a club, a fraternity. Each is one of a group that operates a business, or each has associates in a profession. Each is a citizen of a village, a county, a state, a nation.

To every group, each member feels a loyalty. The degrees of loyalty differ, strong to the close and intimate, less to the more distant. Sometimes the separate loyalties compete, or interfere with each other. Loyalty to family may make loyalty to neighborhood more difficult. Loyalty to church or fraternity, adequately lived up to, may leave less time for loyalty to business or political associations.

How each of us allocates his loyalties is a large part of the pattern of his life. In most cases, we do not consciously allocate our loyalties—few of us thus command our lives. In most cases, accident and circumstances control—permit us to pay a more intense loyalty here, a slighter one there; give us more time for one group, less for another. On occasions, for a while, we take command. If one group has a momentary special need for our loyalty, we hurry with it.

HOWEVER it come about, the degrees and directions in which our loyalties go out compose the record of our lives—a pattern strangely criss-crossed. A spiritual photograph of any person would show intricate antennae going out from him to the groups and individuals for whom he has loyalty and affection.

What I have written so far has, I think, universal application. I turn to a special meaning this rule has for 531 persons, the members of the Congress of the United States.

Each member of Congress, as such, has several loyalties. He is a member of a political party, Democrat or Republican, and has loyalty to that. When the head of his party is President, he has a loyalty to the President. Each member of Congress is a Representative of a State, and his loyalty to his State may conflict with his loyalty to the Nation as a whole—that clash of loyalties leads to many a turmoil of spirit, the decision difficult to make. Vaguely a member of Congress is conscious that he belongs to the legislative branch of Government and has loyalty to that as against the executive and judicial branches.

BUT, ODDLY, the loyalty of a member of Congress to Congress itself is one he is little conscious of. Occasions to feel it rarely arise. Congress he takes for granted; its self-sufficiency, and its continued existence, he takes for granted—and toward the things we take for granted our loyalty is likewise taken for granted. Not often is there a situation in which the interest of Congress, as such, is in conflict with some other institution. Not often is any special claim put upon a member for loyalty to the body that is his own.

But, in the working of this rule throughout every area of life, when any object of loyalty has a special need, special loyalty will be given. And today, throughout the world, legislative government has a special need; everywhere it is in danger, the very institution in peril of extinction. Everywhere parliamentary government is being supplemented by one-man government. The very idea, the principle, of government by legislatures is almost in extremis. In all the world today, the only first-rank legislative body functioning fully is the Congress of the United States.

THIS PUTS upon every member of Congress a special obligation of loyalty—loyalty not merely to this body, but loyalty to the spirit of legislative government. It is not merely an obligation to be jealous for the prerogative of Congress; it is an obligation to see that this body functions well, with wisdom and with competence—to the end that the spectacle of government by a legislative body in the United States shall be an example and an inspiration to a sick world. This obligation bears with special weight upon the new Congress, the Seventy-seventh, which meets next week.

If, in this generation, the bell tolls for legislative government, if it perishes from the earth, the members of the Seventy-seventh Congress of the United States will hear the bell not only with grief but with—sorrow's crown of sorrow—self-blame.

THE ABOVE CHART constitutes, so far as can be determined, the only attempt to portray graphically the national defense organization. It was devised by a member of The Post editorial staff, in cooperation with Government agencies, and drawn up by a staff artist.

CHANGES HAVE OCCURRED in this set-up and more may be expected from time to time. The Health and Medical Committee was transferred to the authority of the Federal Security Administration by order of the President, November 28.

THE MOST IMPORTANT alteration will take place, however, when the new Office of Production Management is made official by executive order now in preparation. This group, composed of Director William S. Knudsen, Associate Director Sidney Hillman and the Secretaries of War and Navy will operate technically under the Council of National Defense, but has been likened to a supreme defense council and therefore may function for all practical purposes in place of the Council of National Defense. So far as the President can delegate authority, the OPM will have direction of defense production, defense purchasing and priorities. Its powers will supersede those of the Advisory Commission, which will remain in a subordinate capacity.

On Negotiating With Germany

OF THE FIVE "prerequisites" which the Pope has laid down as "indispensable" for "the search for a new order," there is one which is of peculiar immediate importance because it is the prerequisite to any discussion that could lead to a negotiated armistice. This, in the words of the official English summary of the Pope's Christmas address is

Triumph over mistrust, which bears down as a depressing weight on international law and renders impossible the realization of any sincere agreement.

The four other prerequisites are: "triumph" over hate, over the principle that might makes right, over the germs of conflict which consist in two-sided differences in the field of world economy and over the spirit of cold egoism. These are the prerequisites of a good settlement once negotiations begin; and it may be added that there can never be a good settlement unless it is a negotiated, rather than a dictated, settlement. But until there is a triumph over the mistrust which renders impossible the realization of "any sincere agreement," there cannot be a sincere agreement to make an armistice or a sincere agreement to begin to negotiate peace.

This mistrust is the immediate crucial matter on which anyone must fix his attention if, like Senator Tydings and Senator Vandenberg, he wishes—quite properly, I think,—to make sure that the British and American governments are not failing to explore the practical possibility of an armistice.

THE PROBLEM of how to end the war is the problem of how, assuming that Hitler is prevented from dictating the peace, in negotiating with Germany to have confidence that the agreements will be kept. Unlike the other war, there is not now in this war any specific question which is not negotiable once there exists a conviction that the negotiation can be sincere.

For in the other war the Allies had specific claims upon the Central Powers—some openly avowed such as the recovery of Alsace-Lorraine, others secret such as the terms of the Italian treaty and of the Russian. In the other war, France, Italy, Russia, Japan, the Serbs, Rumanians, the Poles, the Czechs, the Zionists, the Arabs, the South Africans and the Australians had territorial claims based on inter-allied diplomatic commitments. These necessarily made the Versailles Treaty a dictated rather than a negotiated settlement. The object of President Wilson's 14 points was to supersede these commitments and his failure at Paris was due to the fact that he could not supersede them.

But in this war Great Britain has no territorial commitments to her allies. She is committed to the restoration of the freedom of France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Poland and Czechoslovakia. Beyond the commitment to liberate these subjugated nations so that they may participate in the negotiations for a new European order, Great Britain cannot possibly have any other "war aim" on the continent of Europe. Boundaries, economic and political organization, the problems of minorities are negotiable once there is a Germany, a France, an Italy, a Belgium and so forth which can be relied upon and are able to negotiate. That is to say, though Britain is bound to have strong views about the security of Scandinavia, the Low Countries, France, since they are the bases for the attack upon Britain, the nature of the security is negotiable provided these countries are freed and there is a Germany with which to negotiate.

THE CRUCIAL question of the war, therefore, is to find a Germany with which it is possible to negotiate. This was the crucial question in dealing with Napoleonic France. In 1802 Great Britain made peace with Napoleon by signing the Treaty of Amiens; the war broke out again in a few months. In 1814 Britain again made peace with Napoleon in the Treaty of Paris. The war broke out again in a few months and was not finally terminated until after the Battle of Waterloo. The question in this war is the same question as it was then: not what are to be the terms of peace but with whom can an enduring peace be signed?

It was impossible to sign one with Napoleon though Britain made two attempts and other nations in Europe made several more attempts. Is it possible now to negotiate with Hitler and sign a treaty that he can be relied upon to keep? There are some who think so though none of them has as yet said why or how. But the British do not believe they can negotiate with Hitler, and the reason they do not believe it is that they have tried and have failed, and that so many other nations have tried and have failed.

WITH WHAT KIND of Germany could negotiations be undertaken with some confidence, a minimum of confidence, that the agreements could be depended upon? The answer to this critical question is, I believe, in principle the same answer that men at last came to in the Napoleonic wars. It is that peace can be negotiated only among legitimate governments, that is to say among governments based on the lawful constitutional foundation of their nations. In the Napoleonic era: legitimate governments were in general—though Switzerland was an interesting exception in the Europe of that day—hereditary monarchies, and it was not until France replaced the usurper Napoleon by her legitimate king that a negotiated peace became feasible. That negotiated peace, incidentally, lasted without serious interruption for a hundred years.

What is the present-day meaning of legitimate government? It does not mean republicanism, for Britain, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway all have monarchs. What it does mean is government conducted according to a lawful constitution in which public opinion is free to learn the facts and to express itself. This is what is meant by "democracy" in any careful discussion of the issues of the war. By this standard Hitler, who is subject to no constitution and accountable to no lawful representatives of public opinion, is an illegitimate ruler—therefore an arbitrary ruler—therefore a ruler with whom it is not possible to make lawful and binding agreements.

IT FOLLOWS that the practical prerequisite to negotiations with Germany is the appearance of German negotiators who are sufficiently responsible to a free German opinion to be considered representative and legitimate. It is not for non-Germans to say who they should be or what should be the internal political structure of Germany. But it is necessary to say that the eventual German negotiators must represent some kind of lawful authority in Germany, be it only the army, and that the preliminary condition of any negotiation would be the restoration in Germany of the older German civil liberties as to the press and the right of public discussion.

For unless during a negotiation the German nation can hear what the other side proposes and its arguments, if during the negotiations there is freedom of the press on one side and a totalitarian censorship and propaganda on the other, how can there be any assurance that the German nation has really underwritten the promises of the German negotiators? Yet surely the very minimum guaranty that the rest of the world must have is that any agreement rests not on the word of a usurper but upon the freely considered and freely accepted assent of the German nation.

Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director of American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 27.—As local draft boards throughout the Nation prepare to call more thousands of young draftees after New Year's, a survey conducted by the American Institute indicates that, by-and-large, the public thinks the Army and the local boards have done their jobs to date very well.

Whether the public thought the draft itself had been conducted fairly, and whether the public felt the draftees had been properly cared for in the numerous training camps springing up across the country, have been questions of high interest to civil and military authorities.

As part of a comprehensive survey on the whole question of defense—including industrial and labor phases, as well as the conscription phase—the Institute asked ordinary citizens' whether they thought the draft was being handled fairly.

Virtually complete returns give the following replies:

Think draft handled fairly	92%
Think not	8%

Similarly the survey found that 91 per cent of those with opinions thought the Army has been taking good care of the draftees who have already been intrusted to them. While relatively few Americans have relatives or friends in the camps, and hence have little direct experience with the subject, the survey shows that rumors of ill-housing and ill-feeding have made very scant impression.

"Do you think the Army is taking good care of the men drafted so far?" the Institute inquired.

The replies were:

Yes	91%
No	9%

Twelve per cent were undecided or without opinions.

Since the whole question of peacetime conscription raised one of the sharpest Congressional debates in recent years, the Institute also decided to see how many Americans now approve the step that was taken.

An overwhelming majority—89 per cent—said they thought the draft was a wise step and a "good thing," especially under the circumstances in Europe. Many added that it would "do the boys good" to get regular military drill and physical exercise "whether they ever need the drill or not."

It is interesting to recall that only 12 months ago, before the catastrophic events of last summer in Europe, only 37 per cent said they would favor compulsory military training. By midsummer, as Congress debated the question, sentiment for conscription rose to more than 2 to 1 in Institute studies.

The survey indicates that the great majority of Americans are more than reconciled to a step which roused strong emotions in Congress only six months ago and precipitated a deluge of anticonscription mail, running in some cases more than 9 to 1 against conscription.

Jury Testimony

IT IS NOT often that grand jury testimony is revealed to the public but, by a strange turn in the prosecution of several old Capone gangsters in a Chicago labor union racket, there was introduced in court recently an interesting grand jury discussion by George B. McLane, who was fifth vice president of the Bartenders International Union of the A. F. of L. and business agent, at $10,000 a year, of the Chicago Local. No. 278. The minutes concern the character of union organization in the American Federation of Labor.

The Bartenders International Union is the same whose local in Miami, Fla., was, until last spring, a private racket of Danny Coughlan, Al Capone's brother-in-law. Coughlan was reluctantly kicked out after publicity had traced the association between the union racket and Frank Nitto, the champion criminal of the Capone mob since the retirement of Capone himself. In the Miamis, Nitto, a Chicago crook, is a prominent member of the criminal scum and deals in mineral water for highballs and in alcoholic beverages which were "pushed" by the bartenders under Coughlan.

THE INVASION of the Building Service Union by the Nitto mob, through the election of George Scalise, has been proved in court, and the penetration of the theatrical craft unions by the same mob has been shown beyond question.

Ed Flore, the international president of the bartenders, is a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, along with George Browne, the Chicago gangster who runs the theatrical craft unions in collaboration with the criminal mob. In addition to these two members of its executive council the A. F. of L. also enjoys the presence in its higher councils of Joseph Padway as general counsel, or attorney general, and Mr. Padway, on the side, is general counsel for both Flore's union and Browne's. He was also special counsel for Scalise's mob of racketeers and certified Scalise's good character to the Department of Justice less than a year before Scalise was suddenly exposed as an underworld agent preying on the labor movement in the role of union president.

IN THE CHICAGO case McLane was shoved out of his bartenders' union racket in favor of a gangster named Louis Romano, the choice of the Nitto mob. McLane then appealed to Tom Courtney, the State's attorney, and Courtney got indictments against a criminal named Murray Humphreys, who recently was found guilty by the United States Board of Tax Appeals of kidnaping an elderly union president and extorting $50,000 ransom.

When the time came for McLane to testify he refused to repeat in court the statements which he had made before the grand jury lest he incriminate himself. The prosecution then introduced the grand jury minutes by way of proving that McLane would not incriminate himself. Nevertheless, there was a directed verdict of acquittal.

The grand jury testimony of McLane declares that in 1938 Nitto discussed with him a proposal that he (McLane) become international president of the bartenders so that the Nitto mob and other mobs elsewhere could control not merely the union but, obviously, the vast retail outlet for beer, liquor and mineral waters. McLane said the gangster Browne, of the A. F. of L. executive council, was present at this discussion, along with Browne's two criminal appointees in the theatrical union—Willie Bioff, the convicted panderer, and Nick Circella, alias Nicolo Dean, a stickup man. Louis Romano, the mobster selected to run the Chicago bartenders, also was there.

"BIOFF TALKED first," said McLane to the grand jury, "and said as far as the Coast was concerned, in Seattle, he would contact the various organizations and see that the teamsters' organization would vote for me for general president (of the bartenders). I said others would know I was being used strictly as a 'yes' man, their front man, and I had no alternative in it. I would wind up in the penitentiary or be put in the alley, and I did not favor to run. They explained they had run other organizations, and all they said was two years of it and they would see I was elected and they would parcel out the different parts of the country. Browne was supposed to take care of the Eastern part, around Boston and through there, and Nicolo Dean was supposed to take care of some place else. I was given definite understanding I had to run. Nitto said he made Browne, for example. Browne is here to tell you we made him."

Flore was reelected. McLane was defeated, and on his return from the union convention McLane caught hell from Nitto for drinking, because now Nitto wanted to boost McLane to the presidency of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and McLane had been talking too much while drunk. He was then shoved out altogether and appealed to Courtney for aid.

McLane has not recanted. He just refused to repeat his grand jury testimony in open court lest he incriminate himself.

The Hose And The Fire

(As suggested by Mr. Roosevelt's comparison of his proposed aid to England in which he said that if your neighbor's house were on fire you would gladly lend him your hose and not charge for it.)

Scene: Any community.

Characters: Jones and Smith.

Jones (knocking on Smith's door)—Help! My house is on fire!

Smith—Well, well, I feel I ought to give you all aid short of . . .

Jones (alarmed)—Now don't tell me you will give me all aid short of a hose!

Smith—No, I guess everybody's tired of that gag.

Jones (as the fire spreads)—Please do something! Look at those flames!

Smith—Now, take it easy. You know my position in an emergency such as this. I figure that this is my fire as well as yours. My theory has always been . . .

Jones—Never mind all that now. Have you got a hose?

Smith—My good man, I may not have the hose that is required for a job like this, but I have studied my hose situation very carefully. I know what my hose requirements are, and in a situation such as this . . .

Jones (urgently)—I'll need about 50 feet.

Smith—If you will bear with me a moment, I should like to outline my policy on . . .

Jones—Have you got 50 feet of hose?

Smith—I am in a position to state that by the end of next July I expect to have 100 feet of . . .

Jones (as the flames reach the second story)—This fire won't last that long!

Smith—One can never be sure about a thing like that. It might end very soon. On the other hand, it might spread until my own premises are consumed. In that case . . .

Jones (desperately)—All I want to know is have you got 50 feet of hose?

Smith—I have 50 feet of hose . . .

Jones—And don't tell me it is on order!

Smith (as the flames break through the Jones roof)—My goodness! That's quite a fire you have there, isn't it? It's almost a total emergency.

Jones—That's what I've been trying to make clear. Where's that hose?

Smith—You mean completed hose, actually on the premises?

Jones—Of course.

Smith—Well, that's different. All I have at the moment is a 35-foot length. But by April . . .

Jones—May I have the 35 feet at once?

Smith—Certainly. This is no time to be legalistic.

Jones (grabbing the hose)—Thanks very much.

Smith—By the end of six months I can let you have 100 feet of hose per week and . . .

Jones—This will be all I'll need.

Smith—Don't worry about any charge for that 35 feet. I'm lending it to you. It's a sort of mortgage plan.

Jones (as the roof falls in)—Never mind the details. All I want now is one assurance.

Smith—What's that?

Jones—That you're not giving me every aid SHORT OF WATER!

Local Authorities Asked Not to Mix In Alien Registry

Earl G. Harrison, alien registration director, asked last night that for the present at least, individuals forcement of the registration law and local authorities leave ento the Federal Government.

The four-month registration period ended Thursday at midnight and aliens who did not register are subject to a $1,000 fine and six months imprisonment. Officials said 4,501,693 registrations had been received and estimated that there were possibly 5,000,000 noncitizens in the United States.

"At the proper time," Harrison said, "we may seek the assistance of local authorities in discovering unregistered aliens. Meanwhile, any voluntary action against aliens by citizens, organizations or local authorities, however well intentioned, will only complicate the Government's job."

Friends to Honor Perry Belmont On 89th Birthday

Special Dispatch to The Post

Newport, R. I., Dec. 27.—Perry Belmont, a noted Washington figure for more than 60 years, will be 89 years old tomorrow. Friends will honor him with a dinner.

BELMONT

Belmont, who takes vigorous exercise daily, is in such good health that he looks years younger than he is.

Scion of one of America's most noted families, Belmont was a member of Congress from 1881 until 1889, then served as Minister to Spain. In 1899 he married Jessie Robbins Sloan, and they became the Capital's most brilliant hosts. Their home at 1618 New Hampshire Avenue, now owned by the Order of the Eastern Star, was built expressly with the expectation of lavish entertaining.

The residence was occupied by the Prince of Wales, now the Duke of Windsor, in 1924.

New Tremor Felt In New Hampshire

Ossipee, N. H., Dec. 27 (AP).—An earth tremor shook dwellings in this district today—center of two mild earthquakes which were felt throughout the Northeast during the last week. The tremor was timed at 2:55 p. m. E. S. T. No damage was reported.

Three Coming-Out Parties Climax Christmas Fetes for Young Set

Edith Huntington and Margaret Burke Honored by Parents; Betty Knighton Makes Bow; Mary Ferrandou Is Feted at Tea

THE MISTLETOE and holly market this holiday season must surely have been cornered by the mothers of Washington debutantes, judging by all the Christmas greens used at the unprecedented number of festivities for young people.

Yesterday the debs and their escorts continued the dizzy Yuletide whirl, in a poinsettia setting, with three coming-out parties to attend. There was last night's dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington and Dr. and Mrs. John W. Burke for their daughters, Miss Edith Chapin Huntington and Miss Margaret Mayo Burke; Miss Mary Ann Ferrandou's tea at the Sulgrave Club, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Henry Ferrandou, as hosts; and the tea dance at which Miss Betty Jane Knighton, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson Knighton, bowed to society.

Neither pretty, dark-haired Edith Huntington nor Peggy Burke have had a chance to become blase about debutante parties, for they are both college students. Edith is home from Smith, and Peggy is on holiday from Vassar.

Their party took place at the Chevy Chase Club, in a colorful setting of red, green and silver. The tables were decorated with rows of graduated Christmas candles, rising from mounds of hemlock, holly and red berries. The 200 guests found their seats by place cards fashioned of silver with the debs' initials in red.

Both girls wore white, the traditional shade for debutantes. Miss Huntington's gown was of tulle, trimmed with white lace and embroidered with glistening sequins. Miss Burke had chosen a dress with a velvet bodice and a bouffant skirt of net. Their bouquets were similar nosegays of red rosebuds and tiny white carnations, in colonial holders of dainty white satin and lace.

The two elder sisters of the guests of honor were also at the party. Miss Louise Burke was in light blue and silver crepe, with a corsage of gardenias, while Miss Joanna Huntington chose white satin made with a full skirt. Her corsage was of tiny white pansy orchids. Miss Huntington, who made her debut last season, is also at Smith, where their mother as well completed her studies.

The latter was dressed in black and gold lame, with a corsage of lavender orchids. Mrs. Burke had chosen white flat crepe, simply made, and topped off her costume with a corsage of green orchids.

Sidney and his orchestra played for dancing. There were guests from Boston, New York and Baltimore, many of them classmates of the two debutantes. Also present were leading debs of the Capital season and their escorts.

Miss Huntington is the granddaughter of the late Frank G. Carpenter, travel author. Her mother is the author of several books for children as well as numerous magazine articles on scientific subjects.

Miss Ferrandou Bows at Tea

Miss Mary Ann Ferrandou's Washington debut is to be followed by another in New Orleans. She will leave the second week in January for the Louisiana city, where her grandmother, Mrs. Henry A. Ferrandou, will present her January 17. She will top off a gay season by remaining in New Orleans for the famous Mardi Gras festivities.

At her tea yesterday Miss Ferrandou wore a frock made on ballerina lines. Fashioned of stone blue tulle, it was embroidered with a design of glittering sequins in the same shade. Her bouquet was an old-fashioned nosegay of gardenias, sweetheart roses and forget-me-nots.

Mrs. Ferrandou, who with her husband received with their daughter, was dressed in soft gold crepe, made with long sleeves and trimmed at the neck with mink. A corsage of orchids completed her costume.

The pretty young ladies who assisted the hosts wore with their floor-length frocks wristlets of sweetheart roses and forget-me-nots. Pink roses, mingled with snapdragons, centered the tea tables, and palms and vases of pink and white roses were used in the other rooms of the spacious club.

Pouring tea were Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister; Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mrs. D. C. Shea, Mrs. John Lewis Smith, Mrs. Albert A. Jones, Mrs. Edwin A. Shepherd, Mrs. V. A. Sisler, Mrs. Edward Bacher, Mrs. Robert G. Wilson, Mrs. W. G. Sheehan, Mrs. William F. Ham, Mrs. Frank Slingluff, Miss Lucille LeCourt, Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden, Mrs. James D. Gilliam, and Mrs. Manuel de Quevedo.

Assisting the debutante were the Misses Kitty Claude, Audrey Cowan, Sue Cissel, Marion and Mary Theresa Norris, Mary Stuart Price, Martha Wills Schoenfeld, Sue Slingluff, Nancy Strong, Anna Lou Gilpin, of Wilmington, Del., and Mary Duncan Walker, of Huntington, W. Va.

A dinner was to have followed the tea, but the debutante is just up from a sick bed, so it was thought wise to cancel the party.

Several other dinners and teas will be held in honor of Miss Ferrandou. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bacher will be hosts at cocktails next Friday and the following evening Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith will fete her and Miss Eugenia Wright, of Newark, Del., at a dinner at the Chevy Chase Club. Mrs. D. C. Shea will give a luncheon for her on Monday, January 6.

Miss Knighton Feted At Tea Dance

Many from the service set were present at the tea dance at which Miss Betty Jane Knighton made her bow. Her father is a member of the Marine Corps, and heading those who poured tea was Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of the Marine Corps commandant.

Receiving with the hosts was the debutante's grandmother, Mrs. William H. Y. Knighton, and her godmother, Mrs. Robert J. Archibald. The young guest of honor wore champagne net, fashioned with tiny velvet bows and little puffed sleeves. Her mother was in aquamarine crepe with orchids.

Besides Mrs. Holcomb, those pouring tea were Mrs. Emile P. Moses, wife of Brig. Gen. Moses; Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift, wife of Brig. Gen. Vandegrift; Mrs. Fred S. Robillard, Mrs. Robert C. Kilmartin, jr., Mrs. George E. Monson, Mrs. William W. Davies and Mrs. Harry Podlich and Miss Helen E. Sherwood, of Baltimore.

Members of the younger set assisting Miss Knighton included the Misses Mary Monson, of Quantico; Audrey Davis, Peggy and Nancy Reutlinger, Louise Love, Beverly Bennett, of Sykesville, Md.; Betty Lee Podlich, of Baltimore, and Martha Henshaw.

After the party the debutante and her assistants adjourned to the Knighton home for dinner. Later the young people continued the festivities at the Christmas dance at the Marine Barracks.

Misses Morsell Will Be Honored Today by Mrs. King

In honor of the Misses Mary Tudor and Suzanne Morsell, Mrs. J. Craig King will give a luncheon today at the Shoréham.

Guests will include Miss Kitty Hill, Miss Suzanne Slingluff and her house guest, Miss Elizabeth Moser, of St. Louis; the Misses Marion and Theresa Norris, Miss Courtenay Owens, Miss Molly Stonestreet and the Misses Mary and Margot Mink. At another table Mrs. King will entertain Mrs. Frank Slingluff, Mrs. Leo B. Norris and Mrs. Tudor Morsell.

Mrs. Townsend Off To Attend Opera

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend will leave this morning for New York to attend the Metropolitan Opera revival of "Daughter of the Regiment," starring Lily Pons. She will attend the tea in Miss Pons' honor to be given by William M. Sullivan.

Tomorrow Mrs. Townsend will be feted at a tea given by Mrs. Reginald de Koven, who will be her hostess for the week-end.

Luncheon Planned For Mrs. Wickard

Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, will be the guest of honor at a luncheon on Monday to be given by Mrs. Paul H. Appleby at the Rixey Mansion.

Mrs. Wickard has her brother, Dr. Carl Boucher, of Philadelphia, as her guest over New Year's.

MISS EDITH HUNTINGTON

who with Miss Margaret Burke was presented to society last evening at a dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington and Dr. and Mrs. John W. Burke. The party took place at the Chevy Chase Club and was attended by about 200. Miss Huntington is a freshman at Smith College

New Year's Eve Parties Set

Instead of one large dance, which has usually marked New Year's Eve in Washington in past years, there'll be various small parties on Tuesday night. People are just getting together informally, many in private homes, to see the new year in.

Miss Helen Marie de Limur, daughter of Count and Countess Andre de Limur, has asked a group of friends in to her parents' residence on Wisconsin Avenue. The group will include debutantes, post debs, and some older people.

Another party is that which James Parks will give. He will have dancing and song at his, which will be attended by many members of the younger set.

In past year the party of the season was Mrs. Edward Beale McLean's dance at Friendship. But for the past two seasons she has not held this, and so friends have been organizing groups of their own to gather in homes and private clubs.

Harry Kite, Jr., And Toledo Girl Are Betrothed

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Elizabeth Simmons, of Toledo, Ohio, to Harry Arthur Kite, jr., son of Mrs. Harry A. Kite, of this city. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis William Simmons, of Toledo.

Miss Simmons attended the Smead School for Girls and was graduated by the Liggett School, Detroit, and the Garland School in Boston. She is a member of the Toledo Junior League.

Mr. Kite attended St. Alban's School here and was graduated from St. Luke's School at New Cannon, Conn., after which he studied abroad for two years.

The wedding will take place on January 11 at 8:30 o'clock in the home of the bride-elect's parents in Eagle Point Colony.

Ambassador Here

The American Ambassador to Brazil and Mrs. Jefferson Caffery have arrived in Washington and are at the Mayflower. They will return to Brazil soon.

Party Given For Subdebs

The subdebs had their innings yesterday at a large and gay tea dance given by Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Brien and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson B. Nairn for their daughters, Miss Mary O'Brien and Miss Peggy Nairn. The party took place at the Wesley Heights Club and was attended by about 200 in the 16-18 age group.

Both girls have been friends since babyhood. Though Mary is brunette and Peggy is blonde, they look somewhat alike, so they are often taken for sisters. Last evening they chose identical frocks of dark blue taffeta, pinstriped, with full pockets edged with white lace and ruching around the neck.

Scarlet poinsettias centered the tea table and were banked against a mantel. A ten-piece orchestra played for dancing, and punch, ice cream and cake were served.

Mrs. O'Brien wore a black velvet gown with sleeves of glittering, pastel sequins, and Mrs. Nairn was in brown with a panel of orange and beige down the front.

Miss Mary O'Brien attends Georgetown Visitation Convent and Miss Nairn is at the Cathedral School.

Debs Feted At Chevy Chase Club Luncheon

Miss Mary Theresa, Miss Marion Norris Are Honored

A number of the season's debs attended the luncheon which Mrs. William B. Shearer and Mrs. A. Coulter Wells gave yesterday for the Misses Mary Theresa and Marion Norris. The function took place at the Chevy Chase Club.

The guests were Mrs. Norris, and the Misses Louise Stillwell, Peggy Lansdowne, Patricia Hill, Muriel Maddox, Nancy Strong, Patricia McKnew, Kitty Hill, Helen Kindler, Phoebe Lewis, Nadine Szchenyi, Audrey Cowan, Yvonne Perrin, Achsah Dorsey, Marcy Morgan, Phyllis Richardson, Kitty Claude, Chloe MacDonald, Betty Lou Kauffman, Jacynth Underwood, Edith Pearson, Mary Lee, Anne Smith and Florence Magruder.

Also Coby Ranneft, Kathleen Bell, Marcia O'Brien, Marjorie Souby, Mary Eugenia Coleman, Ann Shivers, Moira Kennedy, Alice Ingersoll, Kitty Clement, Sheila Broderick, Catherine Compton, Suzanne Slingluff, Mary Price, Agnes Birney, Mary Lord Andrews, Tudor and Suzanne Morsell, Mary Betts, Mariana Evans, Betty Lyons, Barbara Beale, Peggy Tuckerman, Janet Hartz, Elvena Rowe and Mrs. Igor Cassini.

Sybella Clayton To Give Tea

Miss Sybella Clayton, daughter of the assistant to the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and Mrs. Lawrence Clayton, will entertain at a tea tomorrow afternoon in honor of Miss Phyllis Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dawson Richardson.

Miss Richardson will be presented to Virginia and Washington society Monday night at a dance given by her parents at Willard Hall in Fairfax, Va. House guests of the Richardsons over the week-end and for the dance are Miss Charlotte Moffitt, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George M. Moffitt, of Harrisburg, Pa., and Thomas Gasque and Allard Gasque, of Florence, S. C.

Mrs. Gregg Gives Dance for Guest, Ruth Anne Clark

Mrs. John Gregg, who has as her house guest Miss Ruth Anne Clark, from Portland, Oreg., entertained at a dinner dance last evening in her honor at the Army and Navy Country Club. Miss Clark, a freshman at Stevens College, plans to remain in Washington until after New Year's Day. She spent Christmas in Atlanta, Ga.

Attending the dance were Miss Patricia Grady, Reginald Grady, the Misses Ruth Ann and Madeline King, Eric King, jr., Hugh and Donald Nicklason, Jean Webb, Miss Betty Gregg and John Gregg.

Birth Announced

Dr. and Mrs. Leon Stuart Gordon announce the birth of a daughter, Suzanne, on Christmas Day at Doctors Hospital. This is also the birthday of the baby's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Louis Pizitz, of Happydale, Birmingham, Ala.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt have issued invitations to the annual reception in honor of officials of the various governmental departments. The function will take place Tuesday evening, January 7.

The Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Robert P. Patterson will leave today to spend New Year's at their home in Garrison, N. Y.

Mrs. William A. McCain, wife of Brig. Gen. McCain, commander of the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot, is at Walter Reed Hospital convalescing from pneumonia.

Miss Mariana Evans, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, has been named a representative to the executive board of the class of 1944 at Simmons College, in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hillman, who are in Florida, are expected back in Washington the first of next week, when they will reopen their apartment at the Wardman Park.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Henry Albers have as their guests their son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. D. C. Hamberger. Lieut. Hamberger is instructing the Naval Reserves at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill.

J. Klahr Huddle, director of the Foreign Service Officers Training School of the State Department, and Mrs. Huddle, have been joined in their Wardman Park Hotel apartment by their daughter, Miss Carolyn L. Huddle. She is a student at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio.

Miss Bradley, Eugene Meyer 3d, Married in Cambridge, Mass.

MRS. EUGENE MEYER 3D

Christmas-Decorated Christ Church Scene of Wedding, With Rev. C. L. Glenn, Rector of St. John's Here, Officiating

Christmas greens decorated Christ Church in Cambridge, Mass., yesterday afternoon for the wedding of Miss Mary Adelaide Bradley, daughter of Mrs. Charles F. Bradley, of Boston, to Eugene Meyer 3d. The bridegroom is the son of Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, and Mrs. Meyer, of this city and Mount Kisco, N. Y. The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Church in Washington and formerly of Cambridge, performed the ceremony at 4 o'clock. The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Dr. Charles A. Janeway, of Weston, Mass. She wore a gown of white satin, with sleeves slightly puffed at the shoulders and a bodice gathered at the front. Her long, full tulle veil fell from a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and jasamine Bouvardia.

Sister Serves as Matron of Honor

Mrs. Janeway was matron of honor for her sister, and the bridesmaids were Miss Alice W. Shurcliff, of Boston, and Miss Ruth Meyer, of Washington, sister of the bridegroom. All of the attendants wore gowns of peacock blue velveteen and carried clusters of snapdragon and iris.

William E. Ward, of Greenwich, Conn., was best man for Mr. Meyer, and the ushers were Charles R. Park and Elliott L. Jaques, of Baltimore.

A reception at the home of Mrs. Bradley, at 90 Mount Vernon Street, followed the ceremony. The house was decorated with Christmas greens.

To Make Home In Baltimore

The couple will make their home at 1936 McElderry Street, Baltimore. Both are enrolled at Johns Hopkins University, the bride as a student of bacteriology in the school of hygiene and public health, and Mr. Meyer in the school of medicine. He is a member of the class of 1941.

Mrs. Meyer, who is a daughter of the late Prof. Charles F. Bradley, attended the Winsor School in Boston and was graduated in 1937 from Vassar College. Mr. Meyer prepared at the Taft School for Yale, where he was graduated in 1937. He also attended the University of London.

The wedding and reception following were attended only by relatives and close friends.

Eleanor Fletcher Engaged to Marry Walter McDaniel

Mr. and Mrs. Percy I. Fletcher, of Fairhaven, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Story Fletcher, of Fairhaven and Washington, to Walter Thad McDaniel, of this city and Bainbridge, Ga.

Miss Fletcher is a graduate of Cushing Academy and Hood College, Frederick, Md. She is a member of the staff at national headquarters of the American Red Cross.

Mr. McDaniel is a graduate of Columbus Law School and a member of the District of Columbia Bar. He is in the office of Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia.

Gallaghers to Honor Mr. and Mrs. Plumley

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Gallagher will give an eggnog party tomorrow afternoon in their apartment at Wardman Park Hotel in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher D. P. Plumley, who will return shortly to Vermont. Mr. Plumley is the son of Representative Charles A. Plumley, of North Field, Vt.

Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher have invited 100 guests to the party. They have also issued invitations for a dinner party in honor of Countess de Lorne on January 2.

Here for Convention

The Rev. J. L. Gallagher is here to attend the Educational Convention being held at the Augustinian College. After the convention he will return to the Villanova Preparatory School for Boys in Oaji, Calif., where he is an instructor.

Miss Rice Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. L. Maurice Rice announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Florence Evelyn Rice, to Capt. J. Robert T. Snyder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Snyder, of Altoona, Pa.

Children See British Benefit Play

Wellesley Club Gives 'Seven Wishes;' 100 Underprivileged Go As Embassy's Guests

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

While the children of Washington patronized the Wellesley Club benefit given at the National Theater yesterday to aid British refugee children, members of the British Embassy staff also remembered the underprivileged boys and girls here—100 of whom attended as their guests.

Among those for whom the British Embassy provided tickets were 25 from the health school, 25 from the clinic at Children's Hospital, and 30 who were recommended by Miss Rose Myrtle Richards, of the Metropolitan Police. Also in the audience were 35 British children, "here for the duration," who were special guests at the performance, and 400 children who were provided with tickets through the "pleasure fund." These included boys and girls from various homes and settlement houses.

The play, "Seven Wishes," by Maurice Maeterlinck, was presented by the Clare Tree Major Children's Theater Company, of New York. The first estimate of proceeds to go to British relief was $1,300. Two large Christmas trees decorated the stage, there were garlands of green on the boxes and the Wellesley undergraduates and recent alumnae who served as ushers wore evening gowns, several of them red and green, carrying out the Christmas colors.

Mrs. Butler Attends With Daughters

An American flag stood in the box taken by Mrs. Roosevelt, in which several children sat, and the British Union Jack was hung from the box opposite, in which were Mrs. Neville Butler, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the British Embassy, and her two young daughters.

Mrs. Bernard A. Chandler, president of the Wellesley Club, wearing a white satin gown, made a short speech of welcome before the play and a recording of Princess Elizabeth's message to the children of the world was played. Dr. Dorothy Sells, chairman of the club's war work committee read a translation of Maeterlinck's message to the children.

Telling them that they had really created his famous play "The Bluebird"—"because I was listening to you while writing it," Maeterlinck continued, "I was listening to you and I understood you because I loved you. This is the great secret of life—love—and you will understand, and when you have understood, you will love more."

During intermissions, there also was an interview with Michael Fitzgerald, 13, from London, by Mrs. S. Paul Johnston, chairman of the relief committee. The Metropolitan Police Boys Band played and Harriet Nash, director of music education for the District WPA, led the singing of Christmas carols. Then the American children sang "America" and the British children sang the words "God Save the King," by which the tune is familiar to them.

Some Boys Bring Own Entertainment

Although there was plenty of entertainment even for an audience of hundreds of children, several came prepared to amuse themselves. Paper airplanes floated down from the balcony in customary fashion. There would have been more had not one of the theater attendants confiscated a program-shooting machine which was being smuggled in by one small boy. It was a wooden block with a groove down the center, a nail and heavy rubber band. Wellesley committee members who tried it out in the foyer while the owner was safely engrossed in the play proved for themselves it had possibilities as a game.

One little girl received her program from the usher with an exclamation of delight: "Oh, look, menus; we're going to have something to eat!"

There was general admiration among the children for the ushers in their attractive evening frocks. One small girl smoothed the satin, saying "Oh, pretty." A boy with a mischievous twinkle in his eyes asked of the girl who handed him a program: "Are you one of the seven wishes?"

Among those in the audience with young relatives and friends were Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Arthur Krock, Mrs. Bolton Smith, Mrs. Milton W. King, Mrs. Morris Cafritz and Mrs. George Brabson.

Ski Exercises, Either Indoors Or Out, Aid to Body Grace

Skiing is not only good exercise, but it gives one an opportunity to wear smart clothes. Before setting off on a cross-country ski tour in the High Sierras, Movie Actress Mildred Coles dons a waterproof attire of brown and blue lumberjack shirt and navy ski trousers. Gloves of navy-trimmed beige snowcloth and sturdy warm ski boots complete the ensemble for a day of sports

By Ida Jean Kain

IT TOOK the ski novices to stumble upon a beauty secret that has evaded the average woman. In the course of training for their first venture on the snow, they have found that leg contours can be visibly improved. Legs that are too thick or too skinny or just poorly shaped, assume much lovelier lines as the result of regular stretching for thigh and calf muscles. These exercises can also be done by those who never have seen a pair of skis, but who would like a more streamlined figure.

To a ski enthusiast, all that is incidental. The object, of course, is to learn to perform without mishap, and that is the idea back of the special exercises, based on kinesiology and ski skill, worked out by Esther A. Clark, instructor at the Central Branch of the Y. W. C. A. in New York City.

Before she is allowed to go near a ski course, the beginner must be in superb condition and have mastered the trick of balancing. But the training that enables her to ski like a veteran also gives her a beautiful figure and a much better pair of legs.

Condensed Exercises

Miss Clark has given me a condensed set of these exercises to be passed along to you. If you will do the exercises accurately and will really work, you will be delighted with the results. Low-heeled shoes—or none—should be worn.

1. Sit on the edge of a low, backless chair with knees a few inches apart, feet flat on the floor and parallel. Without spreading the knees, slide forward until the weight is entirely supported on the legs, knees still flexed. Slide back on the stool and repeat. As you come off the stool, the trunk is inclined slightly forward, but the spine should be kept straight with hips tucked under, lower abdominal wall pulled up throughout the movement.

2. Same beginning position on backless chair. This time slide forward with weight on one foot, the other leg straight out in front, heel just clearing the floor. Bend only at hip-joints and keep trunk as erect as possible.

3. Now for the sake of variety, do this one: Stand with feet parallel, arms held out in front, about chest-level. Arms should be straight, but not stiff, and knees should be slightly flexed. Now, moving the entire shoulder girdle in the effort, fling arms vigorously around to the right, then back around to left. Keep it up for about ten counts. And by the way, don't let your tummy protrude or hips jut out!

Good for Posture

4. This exercise is difficult, but excellent for posture and your figure, legs included: Squat down on the flexed left leg, with right leg extended straight out at the side, foot on floor. The feet should be the greatest distance apart you can manage in this position, and you should do the exercise without moving the feet. Pretend they are glued to the floor. Pull up with the trunk muscles. Now, begin to come up in a gradual transfer of the weight to the other leg. Move slowly, keeping most of the weight on left leg until you are standing erect, knees straight with weight equally distributed. At that point, begin to shift most of the weight to the right leg as you come down in a squatting position with right knee flexed, left leg extended straight out to the side. Concentrate on doing the exercise accurately and don't overdo it.

5. Finish with a relaxer. Stand up and let the trunk dangle forward from the waist, and shrug the shoulders loosely until all the tension is gone.

Even though you consider skiing as adventuresome as flying a plane, you will find these exercises worth doing. Do them regularly and with precision and in a few weeks you will see a change in your figure, one you will like!

Individuality Of Make-up Is Glamour Secret

Mechanics of Beauty Are Available; Results Up to You

By Carolyn Abbott.

YOU CAN be a belle all the year round if you will take the trouble to carry your holiday glamour on around the calendar.

All the mechanics of fashion and beauty are available. The missing mainspring of beauty is only the personal element. What you do yourself with the knowledge of make-up is the thing that will make you beautiful or just part of some nondescript background. Individuality is the "plus" in the picture.

"It isn't enough to have an evening make-up," says Marie Neary, one of the very few women make-up experts and head of a large New York salon of individual make-ups; "you must have the make-up for the particular evening and place."

Night lighting, this expert has found, falls into one of three general classifications: pink, blue or yellow. Many smart night spots surround you in a glow of blue light, glamorous but merciless to a make-up with too much blue in it. The correct cosmetics for blue lights, according to Miss Neary, are golden cream powder, emerald eyeshadow, with carnelian brown shading the eye socket, no rouge (blue light makes rouge look spotty), and red lipstick with a brown overcast.

Subtlety Required

Although pink and rose lights are the most flattering, they, too, require subtle make-up. The best cosmetic shades of these are rose pink lipstick and rouge in a softer tint of the same color as the lights; carnelian eye tint over the whole eyelid (blue or green would look dark and muddy in the pink light), brown mascara and almost white powder that reflects the pink of the lights or room.

For the siren bound for a restaurant or night club where the light is pure footlight yellow, Miss Neary recommends a make-up of gypsy depth, featuring a slash of deep scarlet lipstick with a purple cast (very sophisticated), golden cream foundation, a special evening powder of cream with green and violet mixed in to give an iridescent transparency to the skin; sapphire yellow eyeshadow or mascara.

Here are some other practical suggestions from Miss Neary for applying make-up expertly:

Remove all dirt from your hands before applying make-up. They must be not only clean but free of cream or oil.

Use Cream Base

Always use a make-up foundation, particularly in winter. Use a cream base. To spread foundation cream, apply a dab to five spots on the face—center of forehead, tip of nose, both cheek bones and chin. Blend each area in widening circle outward until all meet.

Don't forget you have ears and a throat. Spread your foundation thoroughly over your face, throat and inside the ears, if you wear your hair high. Rouging the tips of the ears is glamorous with pompadours.

Apply make-up in this order: Foundation, eyeshadow, rouge, lipstick, mascara and eyebrow pencil. If you put rouge on before eyeshadow, you will probably put on too much.

Pat or brush, do not wipe off surplus powder. Wiping disturbs foundation and rouge. Use an elderdown puff or powder brush and brush light as a feather but carefully. Always remove powder from eyebrows with a clean mascara brush.

In using cream rouge apply before powder; if dry, apply after powder.

Now, the Shadows

If you have a wide space between the eyelid and eyebrow, shade it with soft carnelian brown to give depth to the eyes and to enlarge them. Apply color with the tip of the little finger, beginning at the center and sweeping lightly upward at the outer corner. Stop the shadow just short of the tear duct at the inner corner.

Use mascara the color of your eyes if you want to look younger and fresher. To look sophisticated, use onyx or brown.

Never make up your mouth in the daytime without a make-up brush. It is an essential of modern grooming. However, if you want a Hollywood mouth (exaggerated curves and corners filled in), become an expert in private before you wear it in public. Also be prepared to repair it 10 or 12 times a day. If you aren't the mirror-hugging type, go natural—not Hollywood.

Don't make the fatal error of pressing your lips together after you apply lipstick. You ruin the outline. Blot excess lipstick gently with a tissue.

Sidwell Friends Alumni Plan Tea

The annual Christmas tea of the alumni association of the Sidwell Friends School will be given this afternoon from 4:30 to 7 o'clock at 3901 Wisconsin Avenue.

The affair is in honor of Headmaster and Mrs. Albert E. Rogers and the officers of the association, S. Dean Caldwell, Miss Fanny B. Manning, R. Lynn Anderson, Charles R. Grant, Miss Riley Moore and Miss Lucy Fackner, who will receive with them.

Among those presiding at the tea tables will be Mrs. Walter L. Wright, Mrs. Robert E. Kline, Mrs. Elwood H. Seal, Mrs. Everett H. Flood, Mrs. Jean Ramsey Chase, Mrs. Frank F. Nesbit and Mrs. Francis Winslow, present patrons of the school, all of whom are graduates or former pupils.

Before the tea, from 2 to 4 o'clock, two basketball games will be played by boys' and girls' teams, Alumni vs. Varsity. Friends of the school have been invited.

Evening Coiffures Go Grecian

Beauty inspiration has again turned to Greece and here is Elizabeth Arden's new sculptured coiffure. Above the curls at the temple, the hair is wound about the head and brushed smoothly, and the crown is circled with a lacquered braid. The sculptured motif is repeated in the Paul Flato diamond hair clip. Lips and nails are in amethyst jewel make-up

Woman's Mad, Unfounded Jealousy of Husband Is Driving Him to Drink, After 20 Years' Marriage; Family Friend Asks Help For Them

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is the problem of a very dear friend, 41 years old, who has been married 20 years and has a daughter 17 years old. She has always been insanely jealous of her husband—even to the extent of showing jealousy of his love for his mother and child. For the last two years the husband has been drinking heavily—saying that his wife's jealousy and nagging are driving them both crazy.

The husband has an important position, requiring contacts with the public, and he cannot afford to drink. He has always been a wonderful person, greatly admired for his high ideals and charming personality, and held in the highest esteem in his home State. If he continues to drink, he will tear down everything he has worked 20 years to build. His wife realizes this and is now sincerely trying to cure herself of her ruinous jealousy. Aside from this affliction, she has been a wonderful wife in every way and has helped her husband tremendously in attaining success.

Do you know of anything she could read which would help her? I am devoted to both of them and deeply concerned for their future. Unless she controls her jealousy and he stops his drinking, I fear their marriage will come to an end. As for the husband's conduct—he has always enjoyed the reputation of living an unusually "clean" life, and so far as I know, has always been faithful to his wife. Yet she resents any surface show of friendly interest in women who are mutual friends of theirs—the sort of thing no reasonable wife would challenge. Your advice would be appreciated.

FAMILY FRIEND.

Spiritual Philosophy Gives Lasting Peace

DEAR F. F.: Any sort of jealousy is symptomatic of lack of self-confidence, of nervous instability and of spiritual blindness. Violently jealous love proclaims the weakly dependent nature; the nature that is hamstrung with fear of life and distrust of self, yet determined to claim, through the ministrations of others, a synthetic security and vicarious participation in the affairs of the world.

If there is a thorough and permanent cure for jealousy long tolerated in the adult character (as your friend's case), it lies in the development of a spiritual philosophy—such as gives the erstwhile sufferer to see that the Kingdom of Heaven truly is within one's self; that there is no peace, no abiding security, for those who seek to find it only and entirely through the medium of another's regard, solicitude, protection or society.

The Master Teacher of the really joyous way-of-life explained for the benefit of all that "the Kingdom of Heaven is within," and then promised that, to those who found the kingdom, everything else would be given. The verity—the down-to-earth applicability—of this promise is continually manifested in the lives of those who do look inward, rather than outward, for their source of strength.

I need hardly point out that personable people who are casually self-contained, emotionally; who are, to all appearances, happily self-sufficient; who are bathed in contentment of spirit; who make no clinging demands of their fellowmen—that these are the persons who win love most easily and hold it most effortlessly; the persons who, by the irresistible magnetism of their so-called "personality," attract to themselves an overflowing abundance of enriching experience, in their social relationships as well as in their professional pursuits.

Thus, in casting about for potentially helpful reading matter for your friend, one thinks naturally of such books as might restore her spiritual equilibrium and give her to see how to expand her personality outward, from the center of self, so that she is a motivating power and a magnet in her own right—and no longer a distracted and parasitical hanger-on to the coat tails of her hapless husband's life.

Such books as these—offering a practicable spiritual philosophy guaranteed to bring tangible results in our twentieth century society—are few and far between, of course. Offhand, I know of two. One is "The Sermon on the Mount," by Emmet Fox, and the other, "The Self You Have to Live With," by Winfred Rhoades. These two books I have read and can testify to their excellence. The existence of a third has recently been called to my attention—namely, "Power Through Constructive Thinking," also authored by Emmet Fox, and forcefully recommended. So I suggest that you get any one, or all three, of these books for your friend.

Public-Speaking Ability Is Aid To Social Poise

A NEW MEMBER, but she makes a charming impression by her poise in speaking, her knowledge of parliamentary rules!

No awkward fumbling as she presents a motion to her club. By raising her hand she catches the chairman's eye and when he speaks her name she offers her motion in correct form: "Mr. Chairman, I move that—" When the motion has been seconded and the chairman asks for discussion she knows it's her place to speak first and she does so without awkward er-ers.

Such smoothness isn't difficult to acquire. Those "boners" you made in meetings, those motions you lost because you couldn't convince the club of your ideas—all could so easily have been avoided with a little study of public speaking, parliamentary form.

So often just the first weak "Well, I think—" makes your listeners lose confidence in you. Begin affirmatively "The hospital drive urgently needs our support."

Cultivate a positive manner, too. Stand up straight, with your weight firmly poised on the balls of both feet. Avoid any little fidgeting motions with your hands. You'll actually feel more confident.

And easy to cultivate the kind of voice that will hold your listeners' attention. Learn to vary the rate of speed at which you speak. Don't murmur along at the same pitch, but raise or lower your tones to emphasize your points. Then, if you articulate clearly, half the battle's won. Speak every syllable—"How do you do?" not "Howjaddo?"

Become a convincing speaker! Our 40-page booklet, "Self-Instruction in Public Speaking," tells how to train your voice, prepare and deliver speeches effectively. Gives parliamentary rules, sample speeches for many occasions such as greetings, nominations. Advises radio speakers.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Self-instructions in Public Speaking," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Women Postpone Club Luncheon For Roosevelts

Postponement of the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club, honoring President and Mrs. Roosevelt, from Monday, January 6, to Friday, January 10, was announced yesterday by Mrs. J. Fred Essary, the club president.

The change of date was made at the request of the President as he will address Congress on January 6 and does not want to make another address that day. The luncheon will be at the Willard Hotel at 1 o'clock as previously announced and the seating arrangements will be carried out according to the original plan.

Yesterday was the deadline for reservations. The envelopes were drawn from a basket and marked in the order in which they were taken out to determine the seating of the members and their guests. Miss Josephine Hemphill, first vice president, was blindfolded and drew the sealed envelope out while other club officers looked on.

Heads of Junior American Citizens Clubs Here Have Been Kept Busy This Season

THIS SEASON hase been a busy one for Miss Elizabeth Malott Barnes, national vice chairman of the Junior American Citizens Clubs of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Russell Stine, the District chairman. They have had parties to attend and special Christmas work to do in connection with the clubs' activities.

Within the week there have been two parties, one given Monday night for members of the Junior American Citizens' group, which meets at the Boys' Club on Third Street, and another last Friday for that which meets at Central Union Mission. Tonight they will attend a party at Friendship House.

Working with the Junior American Citizens Clubs does not mean sitting at home and planning details for other people to carry out. Miss Barnes, as national vice chairman, is just as interested in the progress of the District clubs as are Mrs. Stone and members of her committee. All of the D. A. R. members who serve on these committees give of their time and personal interest, as well as financial support. They know the children in the clubs and are friends to whom the youngsters can look for a boost when they need it.

Miss Barnes, this Christmas, sent 25 books to the Harold Barnes Club (named for her brother) at Dyke School in the Blue Ridge Mountains. The boy who is the president, writing to thank her for the gift, told her that her interest made him "want to be a better man and a better American Citizen."

NEW YEAR'S PARTY—The District Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will have its annual reception on New Year's Day at the Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont Avenue, from 4 to 6 p. m.

The officers for the coming year will receive, headed by Mrs. Livingston Vann, who was reelected at the recent convention of the division.

Other officers include Mrs. Eugenia Zea Rollins, vice president; Miss Carolyn Rogers, second vice president; Mrs. Francis M. Hoffheins, third vice president; Mrs. Seaba L. Christie, recording secretary; Mrs. Harold W. Roberts, corresponding secretary; Miss Maude B. Snead, treasurer; Miss Martha Stewart, chaplain; Mrs. Albion W. Tuck, parliamentarian; Miss Katherine A. Moncure, registrar; Liza E. Carpenter, historian; Miss Bertie L. Packett, custodian; Mrs. Clement C. Garner, auditor; and Miss Mary S. Embrey, recorder of crosses.

On Saturday, January 4, Mrs. Vann will have the first business meeting of her advisory council composed of officers, committee chairmen and presidents of the 10 chapters in the District.

KEEPING BUSY—A note from Mrs. Herbert A. Rinard, wife of Colonel Rinard, now at Randolph Field, Texas, says she is enjoying sponsoring three Girl Scout groups of different ages on the Field and superintending the preliminary department of the Sunday School there, as well as doing knitting for British War Relief.

During her residence in Washington while Colonel Rinard was in the office of the Chief of Chaplains, U. S. A., Mrs. Rinard was an officer of the Army and Navy League and of the Women's League of Gettysburg College.

Tea Will Honor Mrs. J. A. Linke

Mrs. J. A. Linke will be guest of honor when Mrs. John W. Edwards, 1617 Hobart Street Northwest, opens her home for a tea to members of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of Calvary Methodist Church on Monday, from 3 to 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Karl Lesh, society president; Mrs. W. Cecil Taylor, vice president; Mrs. Leslie Johnson, treasurer, and Mrs. Floyd Hornibrook, secretary, will be in the receiving line.

Mrs. Edwin Dice, Mrs. H. H. McKeever, Mrs. H. Carl, Mrs. O. G. Robinson, Mrs. C. W. Summers, Mrs. B. T. Hynson and Mrs. H. A. Breakey will assist in the dining room.

Mr. and Mrs. Linke expect to leave the first of the year for a trip through Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas and will return to the city about March 1.

Oriental Arts Figure in Home Decoration

By Elizabeth McRea Boykin

EVER SINCE western traders first began to return from the Orient with shiploads of decorative treasures, our designers and craftsmen have been challenged by the fascinating arts of the Far East. In fact, many of Europe's greatest crafts have developed in an effort to copy the finished elegancies of China and Japan.

So absorbed have we been in being influenced by the Orient that we've hardly stopped to realize that maybe this might work both ways. While we of the west were trying to emulate their achievements, the artists of China and Japan were not oblivious to new influences. And probably our efforts are as amusing to them as theirs are to us. European beauties as well as big featured bearded men began to turn up on Chinese porcelain, prints and paintings, while scenes of European life included children with almond eyes. A series of Japanese hand painted wall papers illustrating the early history of Manhattan Island show spotted deer and Oriental pine trees.

Equally curious, however, have been our choice of things to import from the Orient. We've brought over many lovely things along with shiploads of 10-cent store junk. But we've passed up plenty of beauty along the way. Most of the Chinese furniture we know is very heavy and very black and altogether pretty overpowering—why, we don't know, since one sees in China much graceful furniture of simple line, fine wood grains, delicate carving, including canopy beds of great distinction. Japan has created a miniture but austerely handsome type of furniture that we today would call modern if it weren't so ancient.

Future Rulers of Norway Seen as 'Real Folks' Under Flash Bulbs

Crown Prince Says Nazis Seized 400,000 Bottles of Whisky for Army

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

The future rulers of Norway proved themselves to be real folks yesterday, meeting with smiles and gracious handshakes a press-newsreel ordeal that would have floored those of lesser heart and humor.

From the opening barrage of flash bulbs—one exploded with a deafening report that brought legation attaches on the run—to his closing comment on Norwegian shipping, Crown Prince Olav made friends among Washington's journalistic corps.

So did Crown Princess Martha and the little Prince and two Princesses, as they posed patiently for an interminable number of pictures, then dutifully left their husband and father to face alone the questions of interviewers.

What Crown Prince Olav replied does not particularly qualify as big news. He said the expected: that Norway's spirit is unbroken and passive resistance against Nazi occupation is increasing, that the invaders are wantonly "requisitioning",—to use a polite word—the stores of his people.

To Go to Canada

He revealed plans to leave shortly after New Year's for Canada to inspect the air and naval training of Norwegian volunteers. He read from a prepared statement that the Germans have confiscated 825 tons of coffee in the past three months and he withheld comment on shipment of American food to Norway.

But what Crown Prince Olav, 37 and athletic, had to say in his Oxonian accent was, for all its candor and sincerity, surpassed by the actions of his family and himself as far as the impression made upon their temporary order-givers was concerned.

For well over an hour the heir to the Norwegian throne, his Swedish-born wife and their three children—Prince Harald, 3; Princess Ragnhild, 10, and Princess Astrid, 8—faced the first mass dissection they have ever had, as a family group, in the United States.

It took place in the second-floor library and sitting room of the Norwegian Legation on upper Massachusetts Avenue. About 11 a. m. they arrived from Pook's Hill, the nearby Maryland residence where the family is staying temporarily, and were greeted by the Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne.

Posed for Photographers

The Minister's wife curtsied low to the Crown Princess, lower to her future King. Then without further ado, the royal couple and their children were ushered into the library, where a battery of "still" photographers waited.

At the cameraman's request, the five visitors seated themselves before a cheerfully blazing fireplace. All but Prince Harald occupied a divan. He chose a hassock.

For the next five minutes the room's friendly glow was stabbed with repeated bulb flashes. The Crown Prince and Princess fixed themselves and their children this way and that to conform to requests of the flash gun operators.

When a bulb blew up, showering glass directly at the guests, but fortunately injuring none, Princess Astrid was the only one frightened, though all in the room were startled. Bravely trying to restrain tears, she buried her head on father's shoulder.

Harald Laughed

Harald, who had been having the best time of all, only laughed at the explosion. Next, Olav was asked to take a camera and pretend to "shoot" his family. He complied without hesitation.

The newsreel men took over next, seating the family in the adjoining sitting room in front of a painting depicting Hardangerfjord, a spot that was heavily bombed when the Germans entered Norway. At one point Prince Harald almost fell off his hassock.

"Oops!" exclaimed mother, demonstrating the utility of that word in any language.

"I am very happy to pay this visit to the United States," said the Crown Prince as the newsreel ground. "It was my fortune to arrive here in time to celebrate the Christmas season and New Year's with my family whom I had not seen since that dark day in April when we had to break up our home and take up the battle for the independence of Norway.

"Last year the Crown Princess and I spent ten weeks in America and we shall never forget the friendliness of the American people.

Carrying on Fight

"Our country, which had no other desire than to be left alone and continue its peaceful progress, has been occupied by enemy forces without the slightest reason or provocation. Our people have proudly refused to yield to the temporary master of Norway and we are carrying on our fight for freedom and independence, side by side with Great Britain and her allies.

"Our continued fight is strengthened by our firm conviction that right shall conquer might and that the day will come when Norway shall regain her freedom and independence.

"I would like to take this opportunity," he continued, "to thank the American people for the hospitality which they have shown to the Crown Princess and our children, and for the sympathy and understanding given to the great cause we are fighting for."

Refugees from the war in Europe, Crown Princess Martha and the children have been here for some time as guests at the Merle Thorpe residence, Pook's Hill, on the Rockville Pike in Montgomery County, Md. The son of King Haakon VII, now in London, arrived in the United States last Monday by clipper on a visit which was a surprise even to his wife.

From a short prepared statement, Crown Prince Olav read to his press conferees that the Germans have taken 20 tons of chocolate from Norwegian storehouses, and, while the home government's wine monopoly was closed 400,000 bottles of whiskey were seized for the army of occupation.

Nazis Seizing Food

"It is practically impossible to obtain bacon or meat," he reported. "According to reliable estimates the Germans are confiscating about 10,000 pounds of meat in Oslo every day. Such orders are filled early in the morning. Eggs are requisitioned directly from the farms and seldom if ever reach the public markets.

"It is practically impossible to obtain fine flour for hospital patients in Oslo. Fifty thousand Christmas cakes which were baked with flour originally meant for sick people were requisitioned by the Germans a few days before Christmas."

He proudly pointed out that the large Norwegian merchant fleet, including her picturesque—and vitally important—whaling ships remains under control of King Haakon's government in England. He said he expects to stay on this side of the Atlantic "for one or two months, maybe six weeks," and then go back to London.

The Crown Prince is looking forward to seeing again the Earl of Athlone, Governor General of Canada, who is his uncle. He said he is sure to visit Toronto, where training of the Norwegian fliers and sailors is centered, and Ottawa, the Dominion's capital, and probably will go to a few other cities as well.

But during these few days remaining until New Year's, Crown Prince Olav will be a family man, spending the precious hours at Pook's Hill and hoping the next reunion will be under happier circumstances.

Couple, 81, Will Celebrate Diamond Wedding

By Scott Hart

It's an old-fashioned notion and it would ruin Reno if generally accepted.

But this notion, that "the marriage vow is a sacred thing," has kept together for six decades Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Jacobs, of 107 West Monroe Avenue, Alexandria, Va. And today they will celebrate one of wedlock's rarest events in these times—the diamond or sixtieth anniversary.

Each is 81 years old and neither, yesterday, was full of the idea that something extraordinary had been achieved. They looked forward to the anniversary simply as another day added to the nearly 20,000 they have spent together. They never had thought they would grow apart, they said yesterday, for they were married "in a day when the vow was accepted seriously."

They have lived "a very simple life" together, while two major wars involved the Nation and 15 Presidential terms passed. They traveled about the United States and otherwise stayed serenely at home, while Mr. Jacobs did well in his occupation as musical instructor and piano tuner.

The Jacobses were married in Paw Paw, Mich., and came to Alexandria from California two years ago. To their large white frame house, with vines growing by the porch, many of their friends are expected to come today, although the event will be taken quietly, they said.

There are four children: Mrs. Fred Charles, of 105 Luray Avenue, Alexandria; Harold Jacobs, of the family's address; Leon Jacobs, of Paw Paw, Mich., and Mrs. C. N. Wilson, of Madison, Wis.; 14 grandchildren and 9 great-grandchildren.

Hit-Runner Kills Man; 2 Die in Crash

Car Flees 14th Street Scene; Bridegroom Victim Near Triangle

A traffic fatality in the District last night raised the year's total for Washington to 80, while in nearby Virginia two young construction workers were killed as they returned from holiday visits at their homes in Cowen, W. Va. One of the men had been married Christmas Day.

Killed here last night was Thomas Strohecker, 19, of 502 Randolph Street Northwest. While crossing Fourteenth Street in the 1800 block he was struck by a hit-and-run driver. He was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital, where it was found he had suffered a skull fracture.

Young Strohecker, radio repair man, was married only last May, and leaves a wife, Mrs. Ellen Strohecker.

Two Die Near Triangle

Only clew police said they had to the hit-and-run car was its out-of-District license plate, and a report that three men were riding in it.

The dead in the auto crash 2 miles south of Triangle, Va., are Herold Oran Johns, 23, and Dewey Millard Woods, 22. Both are employes of the John McShain, Inc., builders, on a project at Quantico, Va.

The victims were on their way to report for work today when their auto crashed with a truck, which turned over on top of the passenger car and burned.

Johns Left His Bride

The truck driver and his assistant, Guy Morrison, and Harvey Mann, both of Burlington, N. C., were treated at Alexandria General Hospital for injuries.

Friends said Johns had married Miss Jeanette Connelly, of Cowen, on Christmas day. He left her yesterday to return to his job.

The bodies of the victims were taken to the Hall funeral home at Occoquon, Va., pending funeral arrangements.

Meanwhile in Washington today a coroner's jury will investigate the traffic death of Vincent Bergin, 23, of 3218 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, delayed since May 23 by the serious condition of his wife, injured in the same accident.

Deposition Obtained

The couple was struck at Connecticut and Nebraska Avenues Northwest, May 25. Mr. Bergin died at Emergency Hospital the next day. His wife, Mrs. Kay Bergin, 21, suffered a fractured skull and left leg and only recently was released from the hospital.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said yesterday that Mrs. Bergin still is unable to attend an inquest but that a deposition had been obtained.

Alice C. Erickson, 24, of 1832 I Street Northwest, said by police to have been driving the automobile which struck the couple, will appear before the jury.

Five Hurt in City

Five Washingtonians were injured in accidents in the city last night.

Mary Lewis, 64, of 2011 Kalorama Road Northwest, was struck in the 2900 block Connecticut Avenue Northwest by a car, police said, was driven by Robert Ritter, 32, of Garrett Park, Md. She was treated at Emergency Hospital for a possible fracture of the skull.

Julia Schornops, 70, of 725 Park Road Northwest suffered severe lacerations when struck on Michigan Avenue Northeast by a car driven, police said, by William R. Hubbard, 44, of Chestertown, Md.

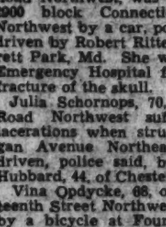
Vina Opdycke, 68, of 1830 Seventeenth Street Northwest, was struck by a bicycle at Fourteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital, where she was treated for a fracture of the right hip. Police arrested Andrew Taylor, 16, of Hyattsville, the bicyclist, and charged him with passing a red light, and with riding two on a bicycle.

James St. Clair, 9, of 1106 Virginia Avenue Southwest, was struck on Independence Avenue Southwest. The car, police said, was driven by Ray K. Windham, 36, of Bethesda. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and released.

James W. McGuire, 72, of 251 Eleventh Street Southeast, was hurt in an accident in the 1900 block of Nichols Avenue Southeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for abrasions.

Recreation Plan For U. S. Workers On Radio Tonight

A plan whereby the average "white collar" Federal employe here could get physical recreation at a minimum cost will be presented on "Your Government This Week," the radio program dedicated to Government workers, which will be heard at 7:35 o'clock tonight over WJSV.



BOWEN

William C. Bowen, personnel director of the Railroad Retirement Board, will discuss the city-wide recreation proposal with E. R. Marlin, assistant personnel director of the Federal Security Agency.

News of interest to Federal employes will be given by Jerry Klutz, editor of The Post's Federal Diary.

Both Bowen and Marlin are former employes of the Social Security Board. Bowen headed the placement and classification section at the board and Marlin worked under him. Bowen transferred to the Railroad Retirement Board in May, 1939. He became interested in personnel work while employed at the Tennessee Valley Authority. Marlin began his Government career at the Farm Credit Administration.

Her Shyness Made Her a Prize-Winner

THE WINNA!—Mrs. Harry S. Boteler displays her prizes

The yen to write—coupled with a shyness that feared to send the writings to publishers—started Mrs. Harry S. Boteler, jr., of 6805 Forty-sixth Street, Chevy Chase, Md., to a different type of literary fame.

Mrs. Boteler has won in contests more than $5,000 in cash and in merchandise, ranging from a loaf of bread to an automobile. She started her remunerative hobby by placing third in a letter writing contest on "Why I like good bread."

"That $25 looked bigger to me even than the car I won recently," she said. "It was my first prize, you see."

Contest fans have started a Contest Club in Washington that meets each third Wednesday at Central High School. Notes are exchanged on the thought habits of the various judges of the country and news of impending contests is disseminated to the members.

Her contest endeavors have led Mrs. Boteler into other forms of literature. She has written and sold several short stories, a group of articles on contests and how to win them and has prepared and conducted contests for sponsors. Greeting card verse also sells well, Mrs. Boteler said.

"I never enter a contest that requires extensive decorating or much research," Mrs. Boteler confided. "I guess I am too lazy."

"One thing I have gained beside cash and merchandise prizes is friends. I have a lot of friends that I made through my contest work. Many of they have dropped out of contests but they remain firm friends."

Mrs. Boteler is married and has two children. Her son is a student at Catholic University, where he is studying aeronautical engineering. He builds model planes and wins many prizes. The daughter is a student at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

Contests go begging in summertime, though, because Mrs. Boteler is too busy in her garden, her other major hobby.

W. E. Williams Funeral Set For Monday

Arlington Man Run Over and Killed By His Own Auto

Funeral services for William E. Williams, 54, of 822 North Irving Street, Arlington, Va., who died at Emergency Hospital yesterday, will be conducted from C. J. Ives funeral chapel, Wilson Boulevard, Clarendon, Monday at 2 p. m. Services will be conducted by John Palmer, member of the First Church of Christ Scietnist, of Washington. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery, Washington.

Mr. Williams was run over by his own automobile and fatally injured yesterday on Lee Boulevard near Glebe Road.

A few minutes before the accident he had alighted from his car on a slope. Police said he apparently tried to stop the car when it started to coast backward down the hill, but he slipped and fell and the heavy machine ran over him.

Found Unconscious

He was found unconscious beneath the automobile which had crashed against a telephone pole on the highway. He was taken to the hospital by the Arlington Rescue Squad, and pronounced dead shortly after arrival.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams had left their home in Clarendon early in the evening to visit friends in the vicinity.

Their daughter, Mrs. J. Martin Emerson, 1379 Quincy Street, had borrowed a second car, owned by Mr. Williams, and had left this machine at the friend's house.

Mrs. Emerson, however, went home in another car and the Williamses left in their two cars shortly before midnight. The two cars were following a third through a dense fog. They lost the third car and pulled up near Lee Boulevard and Glebe Road to confer.

Conferred on Road

Mr. Williams went from his car to that of his wife. He said that since they had lost the other car they might as well drive home. Mrs. Williams left as her husband returned to his automobile.

A few minutes later a passing motorist found the car backed off the road and called the police. The gears were in neutral. The engine was running and the brakes were off. Mr. Williams' body was beneath the car.

Mr. Williams was born in St. Marys County, Md., and came to Arlington County 24 years ago.

He entered the employ of the Washington Star in 1917 to handle merchandising promotion in the national advertising department, which position he held at the time of his death.

Besides his wife, he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. J. Martin Emerson, of Washington, and one son, William E. Williams, jr., of Baltimore.

500 Additional Parking Meters Planned Here

Despite Loss Through Theft, System Has Netted $33,847

Parking meters are here to say Not only that—the District is going to buy more. All this despite the "beating" they have taken in the past six months from vandals, the Commissioners declared yesterday.

Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner, said they would ask Congress for authority to place at least 500 more of the gadgets.

An official report from the auditor's office relates that since July 1 thieves have smashed about 450 meters and made away with about $1,000 in nickels. A recommendation from Police Chief Brown to make daily collections is now before the Commissioners. They will adopt this, it is understood. Collections are now made twice weekly.

As a source of revenue, the parking meters have brought the District $39,322 from November, 1938, to November, 1939, and $33,847 for the year ended November 15, this year. The drop in revenue is due partly to the loss of meters put out of commission by vandals. It costs $25 to replace the working parts of a meter and the District has no funds to purchase new parts.

Of the 309 meters put into service in 1938, 50 have been placed out of service either by the vandals or to make way for bus stops.

Arkansas Avenue Citizens Agree to Seek Bus Service

The Arkansas Avenue Community Association last night voted to cooperate with other associations to obtain cross-town bus service. Hugh V. Keiser, president, announced a committee representing the organization will join representatives of other associations in working out details.

The association also received the resignations of Charles H. Dexter, secretary, who leaves January 8 for Texas with the 260th Coast Artillery, and of Mrs. Isabel Thompson, treasurer.

Plans for a dinner to take the place of the January meeting were announced. It will be held January 23 in Roosevelt High School. More than 400 persons are expected.

Private Yesterday Is Major Today

A change of uniform yesterday elevated Altus G. Moore from private to major.

Moore was a private on the Metropolitan Police Force, on duty at the Fourth Precinct. He lives at 628 Kenyon Street Northwest.

A major in the Army Reserve Corps, he was ordered to active duty at Fort Meade, Md.

384 Called To Take 3d Draft Tests

Officials Order District's Physical Examinations Set For Friday

A total of 384 white and colored selective service registrants yesterday were ordered to report to five District hospitals at 7 p. m. Friday for physical examinations preliminary to forthcoming inductions of citizen soldiers in this area.

Of the 384, some 203 are colored. The latter have been ordered to report on the basis of the usual ratio of about five to one—this is, five to be examined in expectation of furnishing one physically fit candidate for the induction of 44 colored recruits January 17.

The white registrants are to be examined so as to furnish part of the Class 1-A men to be called up in the third selective service induction, the date of which so far is unannounced.

Local draft headquarters is anxious to keep classification ahead of demands since the draft promises to snowball in 1941 with ever-increasing numbers of citizen-soldiers being called to the colors.

In the meantime, nearly 600 registrants who took physical examinations a week ago awaited results of the tests. Of their number 166 are to be sworn in when this area's second induction starts at Baltimore's Fifth Regiment Armory, January 11.

The number of registrants to report from various boards at the five hospitals, and the chief examiner at each, follows:

Garfield, Dr. Stuart Foster—Board 2, 10; 4, 13; 5, 13; 6, 13; 7, 17, and 13, 13.

Providence, Dr. R. W. Conklin—Board 14, 16; 17, 14; 21, 14; 22, 11, and 23, 13.

Emergency—Dr. Linn F. Cooper—Board 1, 14; 3, 7; 8, 19; 9, 12; 10, 16, and 24, 10.

Freedmen's, Dr. J. A. Keene—Board 11, 10; 12, 10; 15, 16; 19, 24, and 25, 20.

Sibley, Dr. E. Y. Davidson—Board 11, 6; 12, 6; 15, 6; 16, 11; 18, 13; 19, 27; 20, 5, and 25, 3.

Retired Takoma Builder Missing; Police Comb Field

Takoma Park police and firemen were searching woods and fields along Sligo Parkway last night for John D. Miller, 78, of 123 Carroll Avenue, retired Takoma builder, who disappeared yesterday.

Miller left his home in an old model black Ford sedan at 2 p.m. to take his two Boston bulldogs for their daily romp in the park. Members of his family notified Takoma Park authorities when he failed to return hours later.

Miller is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 135 pounds and was wearing a gray suit and coat and a cap. His hair and mustache are gray, and he wore spectacles.

Fire Destroys Building Due to Be Razed

Fire virtually destroyed a three-story building at 475 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, saving the city part of the expense of tearing down the structure.

Vagrants using the building were blamed for the blaze which originated on the third floor. Dense clouds of smoke attracted a large crowd to the scene.

Firemen fought for more than an hour before extinguishing flames in paper and rags strewn over the floor. Damage was listed as "negligible" because of the fact the building was due to be razed to make a place for the new municipal center.

Herman Jones, 37, of 27 Franklin Street Northeast, a fireman of No. 4 Truck Company, was injured while fighting the small fire. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts on his hands.

Music Suits Have Radio Up in the Air

Broadcasters' Aide Confers With Arnold, On Rumor Action Will Be Broadened

By James D. Secrest

Radio listeners can expect almost anything to come floating over the ether waves after January 1 in view of the confusion that was apparent yesterday as a result of the Justice Department's announcement that antitrust action will be taken against both sides in the copyright music war.

Officials of the National Association of Broadcasters said they intended to go ahead with their plan to supplant music controlled by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers with that held by Broadcast Music, Inc.

Present ASCAP contracts expire December 31, and only a minority of radio stations have renewed contracts on the new terms. B. M. I., on the other hand, declares that more than 600 stations have subscribed to the rival music copyright service.

Washington radio attorneys disclosed that many independent stations over the country are hopelessly confused by the latest development and are preparing to obtain both ASCAP and BMI licenses to avoid any danger of copyright infringement.

Hard to Avoid Mistakes

The law prescribes a $250 fine for each infringement of musical copyrights, and even NAB officials admit that it's not going to be easy to avoid mistakes.

ASCAP and BMI, on the other hand, have their worries. Should either or both be convicted of antitrust activities, as alleged by the Justice Department, they would be liable to triple damage suits from their licensees.

Unconfirmed rumors were current following a conference between Thurman Arnold, assistant Attorney General, and broadcasting officials that the threatened Justice Department suit might be broadened to include the NAB and regional networks, as well as BMI and N. B. C. and C. B. S.

Neville Miller, president of NAB, called on Arnold, it is understood, in an attempt to convince him that the real structure of BMI was misunderstood by the Justice Department. Neither Miller nor Arnold had any statement after the conference.

ASCAP Divided

Officials of the networks, who hurried to Washington yesterday, referred newspapermen to Miller. Well-informed observers believed that there is still a chance that the dispute will be settled before the Justice Department files criminal proceedings in Milwaukee against ASCAP, BMI, NBC and CBS. This might come through the signing of a consent decree by ASCAP and a promise by the networks and the BMI to alter their practices in conformance.

ASCAP directors were reported to be divided over the wisdom of signing the decree, which had been worked out at conferences between Justice Department and ASCAP attorneys. Hollywood movie producer members were said to favor accepting the decree, while New York directors were reputedly opposed.

Two of the largest producers of ASCAP music, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Warner Brothers, were said to have refused to renew their ASCAP licenses. Consequently their music may be available to broadcasters under separate licenses.

It's Hardie's Turn to 'Bark'

Girl Victim of Intrigue Leading To Trotsky's Death Pauses Here

Stopping for Few Minutes, Sylvia Ageloff, Who Was Duped Into Introducing Assassin To Russian Exile, 'Wants to Forget'

In the haven of her family home a frail, blond Brooklyn, N. Y., girl began last night to pick up the threads of a life shattered when investigators of the assassination of Leon Trotsky wrongfully named her as an accomplice of the assassin.

The long journey from Mexico City brought her through Washington, where the scramble of reporters for interviews and of photographers for pictures made it doubtful for a while whether she or any of her fellow passengers from the South would make connections for New York.

Not one word did Sylvia Ageloff, the girl, have to say about the maze of international intrigue that dragged her, innocently, into events surrounding the murder of the co-father of Soviet Russia. No word did she have for Frank Jackson, the confessed assassin, with whom she was to have had dinner the day Trotsky was killed last August.

Her only message came from her sister and traveling companion, Hilda Ageloff, who said she had been well treated by Mexican authorities during the nearly four months of detention.

"All she wants now is to be left alone, to go back home and forget," Hilda said.

The sister said the girl, not yet fully recovered from a long illness, was "nervous and upset." Asked if the Ageloff family contemplated any course of action concerning Jackson, Hilda replied:

"As far as we are concerned it's a closed case"

Mexican authorities decided weeks ago that Sylvia merely had been used by the slayer as a means of entrance to the Trotsky home. Sylvia introduced Jackson, who later became an intimate of the Trotskys, to the revolutionary exile and his wife.

Sylvia was released by Mexican authorities a week ago. She and her sister began the journey home by air, but their plane was grounded at New Orleans by bad weather.

At first, Sylvia refused to admit her identity to reporters at Union Station, but in a few moments she was paged by a messenger with a telegram, for which Hilda Ageloff signed. Hilda later identified herself and Sylvia.

The train from the South was an hour and 25 minutes late, and the New York train was delayed five minutes while passengers and porters tried to disentangle baggage from scurrying cmaeramen and reporters.

Wife Is Held In Stabbing Death of Man

Dying Husband Found In Her Arms Christmas Eve, Police Testify

Mrs. Margaret Ellen Jones, 59, yesterday was held for the grand jury by a coroner's jury in connection with the fatal Christmas stabbing of her husband, Theodore E. Jones, 60, of 2115 P Street Northwest.

Policemen testified that Jones was found unconscious in the sixth-floor corridor of the apartment house where he lived by James Mallory, colored elevator boy, who went to the floor in response to a call.

Mallory told the jury he found Mrs. Jones hugging her husband and sobbing, "Daddy, don't leave me. I love you."

Detective Sergt. John W. Wise, homicide squad, said Mrs. Jones told him she remembered nothing of what occurred. Wise said that Mrs. Jones recently was discharged from a sanitarium where she had been treated for alcoholism.

Evidence of a struggle was found. Policeman Winfred Young, Third Precinct, told the jury. He said a telephone had been pulled from the wall, that a glass was broken on the floor. He also said he found a blood-stained butcher knife in the kitchen.

Mrs. Jones' son, Matthew R. Jones, of Green Acres, Md., said his mother had been seriously injured in an accident about six year ago and that she had been "acting queerly" ever since. He told of visiting her about 30 minutes before the stabbing. She was cooking supper for his father, a Munitions Building guard, he asserted.

He said he thought his mother "was not herself." He smelled alcohol on her breath, but was sure she was not intoxicated.

Lighting Judges To Make Awards

Judging in Takoma Park's annual Christmas house-lighting contest will take place at 6 p. m. tonight, the Takoma Chamber of Commerce announced last night.

Judges who will make a tour of the area are Dr. William Hooker, of the Takoma Maryland-District Citizens Association; Walter Prichard, Takoma Park Community League; Frank Buschesne, Takoma-D. C. Citizens Association; Donald Lamond, Lions Club, and Mrs. Joy Waters, Junior Women's Club.

Man Mistakes Slain Prowler For His Son

Proper Identification Reopens Investigation Of Score of Robberies

A startling discovery that a father mistook a slain prowler for his son reopened last night investigations into at least a score of robberies closed by the faulty identification.

Realization of the mistaken identity did not come until ten minutes before an inquest was due to convene at the District Morgue into the fatal shooting of "Robert W. Hill." Yesterday, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald set aside the identification and announced the dead man would be known as "John Doe."

Then, less than 30 minutes after the inquest, the slain intruder was identified as Samuel Richardson, jr., colored, 18, of 4501 Eads Place Northeast, by a brother, James Richardson, 20.

The prowler was shot to death Christmas Eve by Robert C. Campbell, 26-year-old clerk at the Securities and Exchange Commission, when the former attempted to enter the Campbell home at 4043 Grant Street Northeast. The burglar was identified Christmas Day by Brodie Hill, colored, of 5510 Linwood Place Northeast, as his son, Robert W. Hill, 21.

Previous to the shooting, numerous victims of recent holdups had identified a rogues' gallery photograph of "Robert W. Hill" as their assailant. With Brodie Hill's identification police felt certain they had the right man.

However, fingerprint records of "Robert W. Hill" did not coincide with those of the dead man. Police recalled Brodie Hill to the Morgue for another examination of the dead man and he repeated his first facial identification. To substantiate his identification he described several scars left by surgical operations. Examination failed to disclose the scars.

While the inquest was in progress police took the slain man's fingerprints to the District Jail. They were identical with those on file for "Samuel Richardson, jr.," who recently served time there for a traffic violation. No criminal record was on file at police headquarters for Richardson.

The coroner's jury exonerated Campbell by returning a verdict of "justifiable homicide."

The verdict "closed" the slaying case, but left police the problem of determining who is the holdup man identified by recent holdup victims.

Efforts to find "Robert W. Hill" were doubled last night. Detectives said his apprehension is the only solution to the holdups.

New Stands Planned for Inaugural

7,000 Additional Seats to Be Made Available as Sales Pass $50,000 Mark

Cash sales and reservations for grandstand seat tickets for the inauguration on January 20 last night passed the $50,000 mark as plans were approved for construction of additional grandstands on the south side of Pennsylvania Avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets.

At the same time plans for an elaborate first-aid program, which was designed to be a model disaster-relief setup for large cities and factories, were announced by Rear Admiral P. S. Rossiter, U. S. N. (retired), chairman of the inaugural medical aid committee, which is charged with responsibility for medical protection of the thousands who will witness the inaugural ceremonies and the parade.

The design for the President's reviewing stand, to be constructed in front of the White House, has been approved and the contract for its construction probably will be awarded today.

7,000 Additional Seats

Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the grandstand ticket committee, said last night that the grandstands to be erected on the park north of the Commerce Building will provide as many as 7,000 additional seats. By far, the majority of these will be in the $2 and $2.50 bracket as all of the lower-priced seats were bought up within the first week of ticket sales. The new stands will contain some box seats, however.

The first-aid plans call for establishment of 11 stations along the line of march, each to be staffed with four nurses, two nurses' aids, four motor corps drivers and first-aid men and stretcher bearers. Twenty-five ambulances, each carrying a doctor and a nurse, will supplement the stations. A staff of 200 trained first-aid men will be assigned to watch posts between the regular first-aid stations.

The doctors used in the first-aid program will be selected from the city's hospitals. Fifty of these men will be under direction of Dr. Roy Lyman Sexton, chairman of first aid, Life Saving and Accident Prevention for the D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross. Fifty nurses will be picked from the emergency register of the American Red Cross and will organize under Miss Mary Hawthorne, of the nursing service of Red Cross national headquarters.

Mrs. Jenks Director

The 50 nurses' aides, composed of Red Cross volunteers, will be directed by Mrs. Christopher Jenks, acting chairman, Nurses' Aid Corps, D. C. Red Cross Chapter. Fifty motor corps drivers who will operate the ambulances and private automobiles in transportation and communication work, will be directed by Mrs. L. E. Harris, chairman of the motor corps, D. C. Chapter of Red Cross.

Model of Simplicity

In contrast to the reviewing stands in which President Roosevelt stood for his first and second inaugurations, the stand which probably will be contracted for today will be a model of simplicity in compliance with the President's own wishes. The design will be typically American colonial, featured by white columns.

The inaugural program actually will be launched Sunday morning, January 19, when churches of all denominations throughout the city will conduct special services for the invocation of divine guidance upon the Nation's Chief Executive and other governmental leaders.

Sunday afternoon also will be marked by a reception which Inaugural Chairman Joseph E. Davies will give at his Foxhall Road home to the State Governors. On Sunday night the Electoral College dinner will be given at the Mayflower Hotel and will be attended by 1,500 guests.

The oath of office will be administered at the Capitol ceremonies at noon on January 20. Following the ceremony President Roosevelt will return to the White House, where he will have lunch.

Meanwhile the parade will have assembled and will start up Pennsylvania Avenue so that it will pass the President's stand immediately after he takes his place. Following the parade, which it is estimated will require two hours to pass, the President will give a reception in the White House for Governors and other high officials.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Geography Is Twisted, But Not 'Santa Fe Trail'

Rousing Pre-Civil War Melodrama Is a Honey; Miriam Hopkins Coming in a New Play; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT WAS QUITE A LESSON in geography that the drama desks were given yesterday afternoon at the preview screening of "Santa Fe Trail." They learned for the first time that, contrary to all previous notions, the famous old wagon ruts lead from West Point, N. Y., to Harper's Ferry, Md.

BELL

That, at least, is the implication of the picture, which has far less to do with the historic trail after which it is named, or the laying of the rails of the film colony's favorite railroad, than with the flamingly fanatical career of John Brown and the advehtures of the West Point class of 1854 in running him down. That, however, is by way of being a gratuitous and unwarranted carp.

"Santa Fe Trail," despite the fact that it never gets west of Kansas, is a robust and rousing film, as full of excitement as it is of names made illustrious by the War Between the States that came along some years after the final fadeout. In certain of its aspects, it is a glorified "Western"; in others, an historical document that revives a bitter question that bathed the country in blood three quarters of a century ago.

The cast is as thickly peppered with stellar names as the action is with gunfire. Errol Flynn and Oliva De Havilland are in the costellar parts, with Raymond Massey turning in an exceptional performance in the role of the inspired madman who launched a one-man rebellion in the zeal of his abhorrence of slavery.

There is no point at this time in reviewing a picture that will be seen on the screen at the Earle, beginning Tuesday, beyond the statement that it is one for the book.

"Come fire, flood or pestilence, the Theater Guild will present Tennessee Williams' new play, 'The Battle of the Angels,' with Miriam Hopkins, at the National Theater for one week, beginning Monday, January 13. It is a modern drama, with scenes in the Mississippi delta. Others in cast include Doris Dudley, Wesley Addy, Dorothy Peterson and Edith King, directed by Margaret Webster, setting by Cleon Throckmorton, music composed by Colin McPhee and may the Lord have mercy on such as me." That, dear parishioners, is the telegram that arrived Thursday night from Joseph Heidt, of the Theater Guild, too late to make yesterday's paper. Nice tidings on any day.

The Kogod & Burka Amusement Co., is stepping out in a sturdy way to welcome the New Year. At their new Apex Theater, out Massachusetts Avenue and Forty-eighth Street way, the first stage bill will be broken out on Tuesday and Wednesday, with Phil Napoleon and His Orchestra, including Renee Brent, songstress, as the stellar attraction. At the Atlas, 1331 H Street Northeast, the policy of stage show in addition to screen bill will be revived on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, with Shorty Warren and His Western Rangers the headline act. Stage entertainments at both houses will be included in the special New Year's Eve midnight performances. The Apex's picture will be Kay Kyser's "You'll Find Out"; the Atlas', "Down Argentine Way."

Christmas isn't over yet for the children of the members of the Washington Variety Club. Tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5, the annual Children's Holiday Party will be held in the clubrooms, in the Willard Hotel, with a wealth of gifts, refreshments and entertainment for the juvenile Varieteers. There will be a Santa Claus—Archie Engel chief suspect—a magician and all manner of hi-jinks. The kids should have a whale of a time, if there is any room left for them after their elders have jammed the jernt! Oh, and that big Christmas tree is still up, of course.

Since considerable to-do has been raised about the picture's omission from the downtown first-runs, Henry Hiser is presenting John Barrymore in "The Great Profile" at a special New Year's Eve midnight performance, beginning at 11:15 p. m., in his Hiser Theater, Bethesda, Md. As we understand it, "The Great Profile" would be all Barrymore, if devastating Mary Beth Hughes were not in it. That ought to be enough!

We-Saw-Her-Once Note

It ought to be enough, even if they left out Barrymore!

In Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Dec. 27.

You all know Paul Muni is one of our finest actors, but he's never had an award for sex appeal on the screen before "Hudson's Bay." He had to put on the trappings of a French-Canadian backwoodsman, train his voice to sound like Charles Boyer and Maurice Chevalier, and with beard and all, I'll be darned if you wouldn't have liked him wrapped up as a Christmas package and delivered on your doorstep!

HOPPER

His running-mate "Gooseberry," in the corpulent person of Laird Cregar, is one of the finds of the year. Hollywood could have found him a couple of years ago. Heaven knows, he was around here long enough. John Sutton is another. These guys are what the producers have been screaming for, and as usual, were right under their noses. And the story, which Kenneth MacGowan took off a bottle of whisky, gives you all the kick without drinking it, and will help save a lot of jobs whose owners have been shaking like aspen leaves.

When I dined recently with the Ben Hechts at "21" in New York, Ben started reminiscing. Told me about the time he had written a picture for Connie Bennett, who insisted upon a great renunciation scene, so she could have the feel of holding a baby in her arms and giving it up. It had no part in the picture, but he wrote it anyway. Then he invited the press to watch the shooting of the scene, which they did. Connie grabbed the child, went into a great dramatic hurricane, the press went into hysterics, and when she looked down at the child in her arms, she beheld an animated colored doll—which ended that renunciation.

Did you know that "Adventures of Pierre," which Edgar Selwyn will produce for Metro, is based on his play "Pierre of the Plains," in which Elsie Ferguson was first introduced to Broadway years ago? Edgar discovered her in a New Orleans stock company, brought her to New York, and from then on, she was a Broadway star, later a film star. Now she's happily married and living quietly in Connecticut.

Perfect indication of difference between movies and stage: Overheard an assistant saying about a certain piece of corny business, "How that gag would lay on egg in the theater—but it means money here!" . . . Bob Hope tells about a new kind of bank night. The lucky winner is given a mortgage on the theater.

Director Wesley Ruggles tells this one on Claude Binyon, who wrote the screenplay for "Arizona." Seems the Indians who worked in that picture on location became so fond of Binyon that before he returned to Hollywood, they presented him with a saddle. Binyon was highly flattered, and went into a long speech praising the Indians. After listening patiently for several minutes, the chief pointed to the saddle, as Binyon paused for breath, and asked, "You like?" "Yes," replied Binyon, "I think—" "Then say 'thanks,'" said the chief.

Since Gogo Schiaparelli picked Patsy Kelly as the only Hollywood personality in her list of America's ten most interesting women, Patsy has gone completely "ga-ga"—even has her hair waved in "Broadway Limited." If she and Zasu Pitts team as well as Hal Roach thinks they will, he'll do a series of shorts with them—which is good news to me. I think they're both tops.

Bette Davis and George Brent were trying to get that squawling 3-months-old baby quiet for a scene in "The Great Lie." But it took Hattie McDaniel's wide smile plus the shaking of a rattle to start the infant cooing like a dove. There's nothing funnier than actresses, who've never been mothers, trying to soothe infants. They usually put on an act which would get an Academy Award—but not from a baby.

Blow, Wind Instruments, Blow That Chorus Again!

FIVE BOYS AND GIRLS HAVING FUN

Left to right, they would seem to be Charles Butterworth, Paulette Goddard, Artie Shaw, Burgess Meredith and Fred Astaire, clowning through a "bit" for Paramount's production of "Second Chorus." The picture will be coming along soon. Its recordings indicate more than one hit tune

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Dec. 27.

FAME: Edith Craig, widow of Richard Craig, the vaudeville star, has been understudying Glenda Farrell in "Separate Rooms." Last week she was assigned a small speaking part in that show. . . . Next door to Sardi's restaurant, on West Forty-fourth, is a ticket booker who has the listings of the current shows on a bulletin board in his window. When any of his favorites appear in shows, he lists their names as stars, on the bulletin board, no matter how small their roles. And so—although Glenda Farrell, Alan Dinehart and Lyle Talbot are in that play—his listing now reads: "'Separate Rooms'—E. Craig." . . . Miss Craig saw it, and said: "That's a nice Christmas present, that billing—but why didn't you go all the way, and spell out my first name, instead of just 'E?'" . . . The broker shrugged, and pointed to his listing of "The Corn Is Green"—which was followed by the name of the star, "E. Barrymore."

LYONS

REVENGE: Oscar Ewing, who was the Eastern manager of President Roosevelt's campaign, is the law partner of Charles Evans Hughes, jr. Ewing tried a case for one of the firm's clients, the Aluminum Co. of America, and won the suit. After the trial, he told Arthur Davis, head of the company: "I worked my way through college in Indiana, and through law school—by selling your aluminum from house to house. That left its mark on me—for my right shoulder is lower than my left, because of the aluminum wares I carried. I promised that some day I'd get my revenge, and make you pay for that. Well, the time's come"—and Ewing presented his bill.

REVOLT: The Group Theater, ever the exponents of the proletariat, recently inaugurated an eight-hour day for all its employes—a ruling which applied even to rehearsals . . . During the rehearsals of Irwin Shaw's "Retreat to Pleasure," Director Harold Clurman kept the cast rehearsing for a long period. Hume Cronyn, whose family is one of Canada's richest, and who, in addition, owns part of "Life With Father," joined John Emery in protesting: "Harold, you're violating the eight-hour rule." . . . Clurman glared at the duo, and told them: "You—you radicals."

DRINK: Nunnally Johnson sat with a group of his friends in a Hollywood restaurant, and reminded them of the fact that he was drinking very little . . . "And a good thing, too," Mrs. Johnson assured him, "because, frankly, Nunnally, you don't know how to drink." . . . "I know how, all right," Johnson confessed. "It's just that I don't believe in following my hunches."

MEETING: Dr. Ernest Hooton, the Harvard anthropolgist who wrote "Twilight of Man," was introduced to Herbert Marshall, the screen star. . . . After their talk, Dr. Hooton was asked what he thought of Marshall. "Mr. Herbert Marshall," he replied, "is an actor who can act the part of the gentleman, when he doesn't have to act."

ARREST: Wednesday night's dispatches from Vichy reported the arrest of Lucienne Boyer, on a charge of evading food-supply restrictions, because her hairdresser had smuggled food to her . . . Two weeks ago Miss Boyer's theatrical representatives negotiated for an engagement at the Versailles, on East Fiftieth Street—the night club where she sang for many weeks, during her last appearance in this country. The Versailles was willing to engage her again now, but the deal fell through because of Miss Boyer's terms—which included an eight week guarantee, and transportation for three.

CONCESSION: When Alexander Woollcott was at the White House last week, he asked the President what he thought of that list of recommended detective stories which Alec had compiled for Roosevelt's personal use . . . "What list?" asked the President—and Woollcott described it . . . "I haven't seen it," said the President—and Alec pouted at this discovery that his desire to supervise the White House reading matter had not as yet succeeded . . . "The President saw that list one of the White House staff later confessed, "but he just wouldn't give in to Woollcott."

Maeterlinck's 'Seven Wishes' Has Premiere

Two Performances of Exiled Author's Latest Given at National

By Richard L. Coe.

Written in exile, Maurice Maeterlinck's "Seven Wishes" was accorded its premiere yesterday at the National Theater by Clare Tree Major's Children's Theater of New York. In the morning, the fantasy was played as part of the regular subscription season of The Children's Theater, while an additional performance was sponsored in the afternoon by the Washington Wellesley Club for the benefit of child refugee relief.

In his latest work, the author of "The Blue Bird" is again in the mood which made that earlier fantasy so long-loved. The last bitter year has inspired the work, though; the author makes no bones about that, cutting into his fantasy daringly, angrily, with condemnation of warfare, tyranny and cruelty.

But by the time the curtain is down, the 78-year-old refugee is his optimistic self again, finding peace and good will for his characters in a fashion which only fantasy could achieve. Surely such optimism comes naturally to the Belgian who wrote "Peleas and Melisande" when he was 30 and "The Blue Bird" when he was 47.

Subtitle for "Seven Wishes" is "Bread Is More Powerful Than Gold," a thought that is the theme of the four-act, three-scene play. Like the familiar stories of childhood, "Seven Wishes" concerns a sleeping princess, a beautiful child who slumbers because her father's ambition demanded not only a son, but also the greatest power on earth.

Conquest and Hunger

Supernatural figures grant the child gifts of wealth, understanding, power, kindness and beauty, but when the power-driven king seeks conquest for his kingdom over peace-loving neighbors, a spell is cast on the girl, to be broken by a prince, but not truly lifted until the ruler's towering ambition is overthrown.

Certainly yesterday afternoon's youthful audience, gathered together to aid refugees of its own age from Europe's war and with many fugitives from the battle zone in the house, did not fail to catch the allusion to the present. Conquest over neighboring countries and hunger at home are motivating points of Count Maeterlinck's fantasy and the fact that the suffering finally do revolt seems to be an indication of what the author hopes will be the outcome of the present struggle.

Mrs. Major's Production

Mrs. Major has employed the same rapidly moving technique that characterizes all her productions. With some shrewd doubling, her actors play the 16 roles with authority and understanding for their audience. John Forsythe is the cruel King Chernamor and Lynn Kenton the troubled Princess Macyle.

Phillip Pine is the heroic prince who saves the fateful princess and Frynn Hamden, a familiar name in Children's Theater casts, is effective as the queen. Awesome makeup disguises Parker McCormick and Helen Kilpatrick as the white and black fairies and Jean Kerr is the faithful nurse.

Mrs. Major adapted the play from the translation by George Iber and directed with the assistance of Walter Roberts; effective costuming by Marian DePew fascinated yesterday's juvenile premiere-goers. The settings are by Irving Morrow.

But the best critics of the play are the children for whom it was written. The young lady with us said she enjoyed it immensely and didn't mind the contemporary allusions. That's what counts.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Dec. 27 (INS).—When I saw little Joan Carroll on the stage in "Panama Hattie," I couldn't help but see her resemblance to the Shirley Temple of four years ago.

PARSONS

Joan has all the baby ways of the little Shirley, and the little Carroll child can act too. R. K. O. has the little girl under contract and when she comes here in May they are going to find a good story for her. If they get the right material she can easily become a favorite. She is a very clever child, this little Joan as everyone will testify who saw her in "Primrose Path."

The tragic passing of Agnes Ayres, at an age too early for her to die, struck a note of sadness at Christmas time for many of her old friends.

I remember so well when Agnes, who was born Agnes Henkel, came to work at the Essanay Studio. She and Gloria Swanson were in a bevy of promising young people and were great friends. Agnes had been chosen by Lorado Taft, famous sculptor, as Chicago's most beautiful girl. In those days the studios didn't bother about acting experience. All a girl had to do was look beautiful and photograph well and Agnes was a beauty.

When talkies came in, the parade sort of passed her by. Her biggest success was in "The Sheik," with Rudolph Valentino, and her most important picture, too. Agnes' heart was broken after she parted from Manuel Reachi and he took the little daughter whom she no longer could support.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Norma Shearer is very ill and threatened with pneumonia at Sun Valley. She caught a cold while skiing at the winter resort; the beauteous Diana Barrymore, Jawn's daughter, reaches here January 15 to begin work at Twentieth Century-Fox; friends of William Collier (fine actor) will be sorry to hear that he is in Hollywood Hospital with pneumonia; Bert Wheeler is telling his pals that he and Phyllis Ruth expect to marry soon; the Jack Bennys, delayed by storms, spent Christmas Day on the train, arriving home at 7 o'clock at night.

Dion Fay, Barbara Stanwyck's 8-year-old son, making a tour of the M.-G.-M. Studio with his pal and stepfather, Robert Taylor; the cutest Christmas card of all was the engraved wedding invitation which bride and bridegroom Mary Healy and Peter Lind Hayes had intended to send out for their marriage before they eloped (exclusively reported in this column); it was marked "void" in big letters. Saw them in church Christmas morning and they looked as happy as could be; someone ought to tell Vera Vague that the hat she wore at the Brown Derby is a tea cozy.

Gracie Allen and I are receiving offers to play gin-rummy in tournaments, only we can't agree which of the teams is the best; Betty Grable's pet bulldog went on a rampage and ate up all her Christmas cards; Edgar Bergen's latest heart-beat is Elizabeth Ryan, Texas socialite; Linda Darnell got the biggest bottle of perfume in town from Mickey Rooney for a Christmas present; Fred MacMurray is balking at R. K. O.'s picture, "True to Form," in which he has been cast—because he is afraid Seabiscuit, the other star, will get top billing.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Maybe you haven't noticed, but the prettiest competition of the fading year is being provided by two little tykes who wouldn't weigh 110 pounds after they had been dunked in a mercury bath. It's the race for top jockey honors of 1940 between Earl Dew and Walter Lee Taylor.

POVICH

Never before in turf history have two riders come down the stretch of the last week of the year in such head-and-head style. As these lines were written, Dew, the Iowa boy, held a margin of two winners over Taylor, the Texas mite. Their furious battle for the riding championship has captured the interest of folks who don't know a race horse from a Percheron.

From a calm sort of competition a week ago, with the two principals riding their horses 3,000 miles apart at California and West Virginia tracks, the duel between Dew and Taylor has taken several bizarre turns. The pace quickened when they both converged at Tropical Park to continue their battle at the same track, and there a fist fight developed between the two little guys.

There was evidence that tempers were becoming short when Taylor, who arrived in Florida trailing Dew by nine winners, started narrowing Dew's lead daily. Dew complained that Taylor was getting not only more mounts but better mounts. Tempers flared finally when they hooked up in a stretch duel a couple of days ago and exchanged loud words even while riding in close quarters. In the jockey room after the race they swapped punches in an outburst that netted them each a $50 fine.

But their battle took even a more spectacular turn on Thursday when Taylor, by riding a winner, reduced Dew's margin to a mere two for the season. Eager to protect his lead and soured on the Tropical Park track, Dew abruptly pulled up stakes and took a plane for California, where he would be among old friends and would be assured not only of more but better mounts.

His trip to California must be put down as smart strategy by Dew, who can scarcely be blamed for his ambition to complete the year as the leading rider of winners. Not only will Dew get his choice of good mounts at the Santa Anita track, but he will be able to get in one more day of riding than Taylor before the year ends. While Taylor is forced to lay off on the last Sunday of the year, Dew will be able to fly to Agua Caliente from Santa Anita for the Sunday racing, which is no inconsiderable item inasmuch as Agua Caliente cards 14 races each Sunday.

It's a desperate and clever attempt by Dew to protect his lead. And he can be forgiven if it seems that he has taken an unfair advantage of his little rival. Because the fact is, Dew was not getting a fair shake at Tropical. Taylor was getting twice as many mounts, due to being in the hands of a more enterprising agent.

Before he determined to go to California in his effort to make up lost ground, Dew tried to jockey for the advantage at Tropical Park by firing his agent and hiring a new one who would get him more bookings. One story had it that Dew's agent, in an attempt to get his boy mounts, offered a proposition to owners and trainers whereby Dew would accept no fee if he didn't win with their horses. He even offered to make a bet for any trainer with a likely horse if Dew were given the mount. But it was no dice. Taylor still getting the better and the most horses.

The number of winners a jockey rides is, incidentally, no accurate gauge of his skill as a jockey A rider in a hot streak, as Taylor is, is sought out by owners and trainers who have horses fit and ready. Better jockeys who do not happen to be winning consistently don't get the pick of these mounts. Dew was in a slump when he struck Florida and horsemen with fit horses were not eager to risk their entries with him.

Whoever wins the battle to ride the most winners, be it Dew or Taylor, he will not be recognized as the best boy in silks. In fact, he may not be rated among the best dozen jockeys. The boys who have already made their marks as jockeys never ride the most winners. They are the Nick Walls, the Sonny Workmans, the Johnny Pollards and the Basil James' who can command big fees and do not trifle with more than one or two races on the program.

But the Taylor-Dew duel is a refreshing sort of affair, nevertheless. Because they are in there riding mostly for glory. No large purse, not even a trophy of any kind awaits the winner of their battle. At the year's end, the winner will own merely his nominal riding fees and his press clippings. In the most commercial of all sports, they are battling chiefly for honor. Maybe that's why we inscribed this piece.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Kansas City, Dec. 27.—The most extraordinary man of God in the country, Dr. Burris Jenkins, who is building here a nondenominational church that completely reflects his unique position in religion, is looking forward eagerly to promised aid from brethren Mike Jacobs and Joe Louis.

CONSIDINE

Dr. Jenkins, father of the greatest sports artist of all time, told us today of his dreams for his house of worship, and the curious story of his alliance with what has been sometimes called the ignoble art of self-defense.

"I was in New York not long ago, visiting my son and daughter-in-law, and arranging for that wonderful gift of $30,000 from Mrs. Helen Domnes, daughter of the late F. G. Bonfils, when my kids suggested that I go to see Mike Jacobs and seek his aid.

"Well, that was all right by me," the great man recalled for us, as we sat in his modest, sunny living room. "We called on Mike, and I told him how much I needed to continue work on my church. His face lighted up and he said, 'Now, there's a coincidence. I've been wanting to put a Louis fight in Kansas City. Look, I just got a letter from there, about this fellow Tony Novak. Sure, I'd make it for the benefit of your church.'"

Dr. Jenkins took a reflective drag of his cigaret, then he told us: "I told Mike that that was wonderful. I had heard a lot about Joe. I had heard that when he bought his new farm he found an old white couple living on a part of it—people whose forebears had helped run the 'underground railroad' which rescued so many of Joe's own kind from slavery. So Joe put them into a new home on the place and told them they could stay there as long as they lived. That was the deed of a good man. I could not see then, nor see now, anything wrong about a good man helping build a church to make more good men and women."

Dr. Jenkins chuckled in his kindly way. I'm not overlooking Mike, of course. If this match can go through I want to buy the piece of property next to the church site and build there a kind of arena, for outdoor services, meetings and concerts, and put in playing facilities like tennis and badminton courts. I'd call that Michael Straus Jacobs Park. I told Mike, too, that I'm a sort of underrabbi, and I am. I've spoken in many synagogues . . . many of them. And one of these synagogues here did a wonderful thing when my old church burned down a year ago. It invited me to bring my congregation to the synagogue and use it."

Frank Lloyd Wright, foremost architect, and a member of Dr. Jenkins' congregation, designed the new church—whose foundations already are down. It will be completely functionary, in the modern manner. Spires cost too much money and are more ornamental than anything else, Dr. Jenkins has decided, so the spire of his community church will be twin searchlights. It will have no stained glass, no frescoes, and it will be constructed by the gunite method. It will be peach-colored, have auto parking decks, and Dr. Jenkins will continue his long-time practice of showing good moving pictures on Sunday evenings ("they're better than most sermons"). And of holding open forums on Wednesday. "I don't think God will have any trouble getting into my new church," he said.

"I've had a remarkable response so far as the benefit fight is concerned," the famed author, lecturer, minister of the gospel former newspaper editor and radio executive told us. "Only two protests. The remainder has been fine and friendly and understanding. It ought to be a good fight. If Joe meets our Tony Novak he'll be running up against a tough customer.

Jockey Taylor Ties Dew for Riding Honors

Eagles Beat Rovers, 3 to 2, at Riverside

Fourth Victory in Five Games With New York Necessitates Stiff Defense in Final Period

By Tony Neri

The Washington Eagles opened play in the Atlantic City Boardwalk Cup series by handing the New York Rovers a 3-to-2 setback last night in an Eastern Amateur League hockey game as 3,500 spectators looked on at Riverside Stadium

Washington halted a fast-skating reckless-shooting Gotham team in the third period after Walter Hamilton, unassisted, scored for the Rovers at 3:51. The fine defensive work of Len Burrage and Hal Dewey helped the home team no end, especially in the last period.

The victory was the Eagles' fourth over the New York sextet in five games. Hamilton, Check and Wilson played brilliantly for the losers in the clean-fought contest. Outside of a sideboard spill administered to Frank Mailley in the closing period by Elmer Kreller, the game was devoid of rough play.

Norm Burns shone to best advantage for the Eagles although he was unable to add to his 27-point scoring lead in the league.

Eagles Grab Early Lead

Although the visitors were able to score first, the Eagles held a 2-to-1 lead at the end of the first period. Len Burrage and Norman Burns, the league's leading scorer, combined in some fast work in assisting Hal Dewey and Frank Mailley in tallying for the Eagles. Dewey's marker came at 2:45, after Burrage had carried the puck with some fancy skating to within shooting distance of the New Yorkers' net.

Washington's second score of the period came at 19:59, as Mailley shot a low one past Goalie Fischer. James Wilson, of the Rovers, opened scoring for the game at 1:45 with the able assistance of Krellers. Les Colvin started at goal for the Eagles in the place of Gordon Hemming.

Four minor penalties marked the opening period playing. Trainor, Check and Hamilton, of the Rovers, were committed for two-minute stands. Pranschke was the lone Eagle committed.

Fischer in Fine Form

Fischer, playing one of his better games for the Rovers at goal, made numerous saves as Courteau, McBride and Dewey fired repeated shots at the New York net in the second stanza, which ended with one goal scored.

One of Dewey's shots slid by Fischer at 15:02. Referee Bill Chadwick disallowed a shot by Pranschke in the period, ruling that the whistle had blown before the shot was made. Ted Ferens, of the New Yorkers, received a two-minute penalty on the play.

The line-up:

Eagles.	Position.	Rovers.
Colvin	Goal	Fischer

Alumni Wins Over Varsity At St. John's

Flocking back to their alma mater from active basketball careers at nearby colleges, St. John's High Alumni smashed the 1940 Johnnies by a 36-12 score last night at the Vermont Avenue gym.

Most of them members of the 1937 cadet team, which walked away with the city championship, the Alumni were seriously threatened last night only for a brief space early in the first period. Buddy Speiss' 5 points paced the Cadets to an 8-4 lead, but quick retaliation from old grads Jimmy Mulvihill and Joey Gallagher made up the difference and the Alumni took their rest with a 10-8 advantage.

Coach Gene Augusterfer's charges managed for exactly no points in the third period against a graduate five handled perfectly for the night by Bill Burnett, and in the last session accounted for only four points. Meanwhile the alumni were hitting the basket almost at will.

Jimmy Giebel, sophomore center of Georgetown U., was the high scorer of the night despite action in only half the game, scoring a total of 10 points. Four foul shots and two field goals gave Frank Cady, on vacation from Charlotte Hall Military Academy, second

Georgetown Drills on Soggy Field at Miami

Hoya Players Admit Fatigue in First Florida Practice

By Jack Munhall

Post Staff Writer

Miami Beach, Dec. 27.—Following a short period ascribed to photographers who took all the pictures they believed they would need until January 1, Georgetown University today ran through its first local practice for the Orange Bowl game on a Flamingo Park field that was soggy from heavy rains last night and most of this afternoon

The day was cool for Miami, but unusually humid, and at the end of a brisk one and one-half hour workout, closed to everyone but Washington, D. C., newspapermen, the players admitted to great fatigue. Flushed faces, blood-shot eyes and heaving chests was the picture when Head Coach Jack Hagerty gave the welcome order to quit.

Many of the Hoyas described their weariness as "worse than the first day of practice in the fall." However, this was expected by the Georgetown coaches, who predict that it may require two or three more days for the team to become acclimated.

Photographers Invited

Hagerty, because he does not want every practice interrupted, invited all photographers to attend today's workout and "shoot" all the pictures they want before Georgetown tackles Mississippi State in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day. . . .

Most photographed of the Georgetown players were Augie Lio, All-American guard; giant Al Blozis, the tackle and national intercollegiate shot-put champion, and Jules Kashlap, the Lithuanian halfback, who was voted by his teammates as the Hoyas' most valuable player in 1940.

Gag pictures were galore, with perhaps the best being a shot of two players standing in a puddle

Fordham Receives Real Texas Welcome

Shootin' Irons and Wailing of Sirens Greet Northern Team; Cold Weather Prevails; Coach Crowley Fears Aggie Eleven

By Felix R. McKnight

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 27.—Shootin' irons blazed, sirens wailed, a snowstorm of cotton drifted from skyscraper windows, thousands yelled a Texas welcome—and Fordham University's football team came to town today.

Synthetic cowboys, most of them wearing their first boots and ten gallon hats, whooped it up as the great Eastern team that plays the Texas Aggies in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day rumbled through the streets on a huge hook-and-ladder fire truck.

Fourteen miles from Dallas, at picturesque old Mesquite, a band of city slickin' junior chamber of commerce lads masked in red bandanas "held up" the Fordham train in a volley of pistol shots, scared exactly no one, and then presented the Fordham players with boots and cowboy hats.

Ordered Boots Removed

Sleepy Jim Crowley, coach of the Fordhams, had a mild attack of apoplexy when he discovered his grid warriors limping around in the cowboy boots and ordered the footwear back into trunks until after the game. He feared the Texas hospitality would develop blisters on his lads' feet.

Cold, dreary weather prevailed, Crowley said it was almost to their liking if rain of the last two days would depart.

Immediately Crowley started worrying about the Aggies.

"We all saw John Kimbrough in New York a few days ago—and we went to work a lot harder after he paid us a visit. He's a giant!"

Crowley planned two workouts daily for the Fordhams until the day of the game, excluding Sunday. However, there will be no more actual scrimmage.

"Our main problem is to perfect enough defense to meet the versatile attack we know the Aggies have used for two seasons. We are quite aware of the fact that they can run as well as they pass.

Seixas Wins In National Net Tourney

By the United Press

Camden, N. J., Dec. 27.—E. Victor Seixas, top-seeded Philadelphia star, continued to feature the National Indoor Junior and Boys Tennis Tournament tonight by being the first to enter the semifinal round of the junior division.

Seixas smashed through stiff opposition offered by Stephen Bromley, Brooklyn, N. Y., to gain the semifinals with a 6—1, 6—4 victory. Bromley was the first player to win a game from the Penn Charter youth in five sets. Seixas won his first and second rounds in love sets.

Richard J. Bender, Westfield, N. J., a Princeton student and seeded second, also went into the semifinals by overcoming Stewart McCracken, of Pennsylvania University, 6—2, 6—2. McCracken, who hails from Michigan, is said to have the tournament's fastest service.

Fred Kovaleski, Hamtramck, Mich., who upset sixth-seeded Fred Krais, of Pelham Manor, N. Y., completed the quarter-finals by trouncing Jack Cook, Beechurst, N. Y., 6—1, 7—5.

Chad Johnson, Philadelphia, second-seeded in the boys division, was the first to enter the semifinals with a 6—3, 6—1 victory over sixth-seeded Roone Parmele 3d, Staten Island, N. Y.

Texan Rides Two Winners At Tropical

Two Are Tied at 283 For Year; Dew Flies To Coast in Effort To Sew Up 1940 Title

By the United Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 27.—Walter Lee Taylor pulled into a tie with Earl Dew in the race for leading jockey honors of the year when he rode two winners at Tropical Park today and brought his total for the year to 283.

Taylor, celebrating his nineteenth birthday, rode Arabesque, winner in the second race, and booted home Paul Lee in the seventh. Arabesque paid $17.90 and Paul Lee $10.

Dew was en route by plane to California, where he will continue the race tomorrow. Dew is booked to ride in 10 of the 14 races at Agua Caliente Sunday.

Taylor, a native of Houston, Tex., started riding at the Tropical Park meeting ten winners behind Dew. In seven racing days he booted home 13 winners while his rival scored on three. The boy rode at least one winner every day, twice scoring "triples" and twice scoring "doubles."

Taylor has been more active in Florida than Dew, riding almost twice the number of horses. But he only was up on three today and made good on two of them to pull even in the race for the championship.

Taylor missed a chance to pass Dew today when his other mount, Syl's Betty, a 20-1, shot, tired in the stretch drive after the boy kept him on top throughout the third race. He finished second by half a length.

Taylor received a tremendous ovation when he brought Paul Lee back to the winner's circle after the seventh race. The boy grinned at the crowd while weighing in and said he was confident he would pass Dew in the last three days although Dew will have an extra day by riding at Agua Calente Sunday.

Tennessee's Big Success Due to Unity

Coach Neyland Uses Word Describing Team; Sacrifice by Players

By the Associated Press

Edgewater Park, Miss., Dec. 27.—"Unity."

That word was Maj. Bob Neyland's answer today to a question as to what was the biggest factor in the success of his Tennessee Volunteers, who have gone unbeaten through three regular seasons and are approaching their third straight bowl game.

The coach of the Vols, who are training here for the Sugar Bowl fray with Boston College, closed his eyes and pondered a full half-minute when the question was asked, but his answer was definite.

Tremendous sacrifice and "the old tiresome method of going over and over the same thing" are essential to achieve this unity, he declared. This means, he said, that there must be no "stars" as far as a team is concerned.

Concerted Action

"It requires more than anything else that every player keep paramount the idea of concerted action and his part as a definite cog in the machine," he continued. "Only if he can keep these things in mind will he be a valuable part of the whole.

"On every football team there are 'workhorses' who do their jobs without glory. Pride of achievement keeps them going. A really great football player is the best judge of his own performance and the consciousness of a job well done is the greatest incentive we can have in any job."

This does not imply, he explained, "sharing the honors" by such methods as dividing up the scoring opportunities, for "it is really an accident who makes a touchdown."

"A man is given the ball and he scores with it. That was just his function of the play. Nobody should know who makes the touchdown."

"But how does your team achieve this unity?" he was asked.

"I don't know," he replied.

Just Too Modest

An explanation was suggested by Dr. L. R. Hesler, dean of Tennessee's college of liberal arts and member of the athletic council, who was sitting in on the conversation.

"He's too modest to tell you," said Dean Hesler, "but the answer is a coach who studies and works at the game 13 months every year."

Rice's Owls Beat Albright, 73 to 65

Hershey, Pa., Dec. 27 (AP).—Rice's touring basketball Owls won their sixth straight game tonight dropping shots from all angles to beat Albright, 73 to 65.

The game was the second of a double-header played before 2,500 at the Hershey Arena. Santa Clara trounced Franklin and Marshall, 55 to 26, in the opener.

Rice took an early 8-5 edge, but Albright, led by Sophomore Dick Shollenberger, found the range and put the Lions ahead by 19-14 and again by 21-20 and 25-24 before the Texans pulled away for a 37-31 edge at the half.

South Has Edge in Third Blue-Gray Grid Warfare Today

17,000 May See Battle In Alabama

'Wide-Open Game' Predicted by Coaches Of Both Teams On Eve of Meeting

By the Associated Press

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 27.—Dixie's All-Stars were installed by the betting fraternity today as favorites to defeat the North in the third Blue and Gray football classic here tomorrow in this first capital of the Confederacy.

A capacity crowd of 17,000-odd was anticipated for the game that has arrayed for action some of the Nation's finest gridders. The footing in Cramton Bowl will be uncertain because of recent heavy rains, but the weather man forecast a "pleasant day."

While the South was made the favorite—up to a touchdown—in downtown circles, Co-coaches Lynn Waldorf (Northwestern) and Carl Snavely (Cornell) told a luncheon club, "We have a fine bunch of boys; the material to win with; and we think they'll do it." Just as confident were Co-coaches Jess Neely (Rice) and Ray Wolf (North Carolina) of their "Rebel" outfit.

All four frankly predicted "a wide-open game, with a lot of trick plays and passes."

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARABESQUE, $17.90, $8.20, $6.00; LEWISTOWN, $6.80, $4.10; CADET BOB, $4.70.

ARABESQUE moved forwardly with a rush in the opening quarter mile, drew out rounding the turn, but bore out entering the stretch losing ground, came again and won going away. LEWISTOWN, pinched back while on the inside, swung around the leaders in the final furlong and finished fastest of all. CADET BOB, well up throughout, continued gamely to outlast RIGHT AS RAIN. The latter weakened in the stretch run.

Daily Double, WAR DECLARED and ARABESQUE, Paid $84.50

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:03. Winner, Lexbrook Stable's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIN MUSIC, $10.30, $5.90, $4.20; SYL'S BETTY, $13.00, $8.20; MAECARO, $7.50.

CHIN MUSIC, going in nearest pursuit of the leader in the early stages, gained steadily in the final quarter mile, took command 50 yards out and won going away. SYL'S BETTY opened up a long lead the first half mile, but then began to falter MAECARO, going forwardly all the way, just lasted long enough to withstand MINEE-MO'S late rush. The latter came with a belated rush.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:31½. Winner, Mrs. Alice A. Phillips' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OLD FRIEND, $21.40, $9.50, $4.00 DARBY DESMOND, $6.90, $3.90; ROGERS BOY, 2.70.

OLD FRIEND, slightly restrained in the early running, moved up rapidly while saving ground entering the stretch and outlasted DARBY DESMOND in the final drive. DARBY DESMOND, showing good speed in the going, came wide entering the stretch, which cost him the race. ROGERS BOY, buffeted and crowded back on the stretch turn, came to the outside in the last furlong and closed gamely, but could not get up.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:59. Off 4:00. Winner, H. Friedberg's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MONTSIN, $18.00, $7.00, $3.10; ALHALON, $5.40, $3.20; RAISE UP, $2.50.

MONTSIN, lightly restrained until the stretch turn, moved to the front swiftly when placed to pressure and won as his rider wished. ALHALON, a keen factor throughout, faltered in the final drive, yet outlasted RAISE UP. The latter broke tardily, circled the field turning into the stretch and disposed of the others.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:26. Off 4:27½. Winner, Lexbrook Stable's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIBERTY FRANC, $5.40, $2.80, $2.40; REMARKABLE, $2.70, $2.40; COUNT MORSE, $2.90.

LIBERTY FRANC, never far from the leader, took command after a mild drive entering the stretch, but was taken in hand at the end. REMARKABLE set a fast pace the first half mile, but faltered in the stretch run. COUNT MORSE, slow to begin, came with a rush and wore EQUISTONE down in the last strides.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:59. Off 5:00½. Winner, Mrs. E. Golo's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAIRS, $4.60, $3.50, $2.70; REDROCK CANYON, $15.40, $7.90; ENDYMION, $3.70.

STAIRS, eased off the pace the first half mile, raced her opposition into defeat rounding the turn and drew out, winning mildly urged. REDROCK CANYON, outrun for 6 furlongs, gradually bettered his position on the outside the remainder of the trip and disposed of the others. ENDYMION, a forward contender and saving ground all the way, had no excuses.

G. W. Five Battles Giant Kansas State at Riverside Tonight

Season's 5th Victory Aim Of Colonials

Sophomore-Studded Invaders Have Good Style; G. W. Players On Edge for Fray

George Washington will catch the Kansas State College basketball team on the second stop of its three-game Eastern trip tonight, meeting the Wildcats in Riverside Stadium in an intersectional contest set for 8:30 p. m.

The Big Six Conference contenders bring a rapidly improving sophomore-studded quintet here, a colorful club that alternates the quick-break and deliberate offense and uses the popular man-for-man defense.

It will be the second helping of Midwestern court styles for the Colonials, but the Wildcats are not touted as highly as the powerful Oklahoma Aggies and thus Coach Bill Reinhart's G. W.'s will be slight favorites to notch a fifth victory in six starts.

Wildcats Won Two

The Wildcats rolled over two early-season opponents, Washburn, twice, and Doane College before losing by three points to Kentucky's Southeastern Conference champs. They played Villanova in Philadelphia last night and will continue on to unbeaten Seton Hall for a Monday night encounter.

One of the youngest college court coaches in the country, 30-year-old Jack Gardner, is in his second year at the Manhattan (Kans.) school and after an indifferent opening season his style of play is beginning to take effect and the K-Staters have been tabbed as the team to watch in the Big Six Conference, one of the country's fastest basketball circuits.

George Washington will be making its second start in Riverside Stadium and hoping for its first victory. Triumphs over future Southern Conference foes, Washington and Lee, Davidson, Clemson and Duke, have been recorded on the Generals' and Tech gym floors, while their lone defeat was the heartbreaking overtime loss to the Aggies in Riverside, home of all their future games.

The Colonials, to a man, passed up Christmas dinners at home in order to stay here and practice and keep in condition for their two big battles with Midwestern opponents, K-State tonight and the University of Minnesota on Monday.

Reinhart staged conditioning drills Monday and Tuesday and after a Christmas Day holiday put the boys through real stiff workouts Thursday and yesterday.

Four Are Giants

Four of the five visitors—Norris Holstrom, George Mendenhall, Dan Howe and Tom Guy, the latter a 6-foot 3-inch 26-year-old junior—tower over the 6-foot-1 mark, but their height edge will be slight, as G. W. answers with Charley Jones, 6-foot-4, and his two 6-foot-3 mates, Joe Comer and Matt Zunic. Oddly enough, the two shortest men on the team are the ones to watch, however—Jack Horacek of the invaders, who is their No. 1 scorer, and Bobby Gilham, one of the best local courtmen in years who has given G. W.'s Southern Conference foes a look at his heels thus far.

G. W. is anxious for a victory tonight, as they want the edge over their Western foes this season, and it can be gained only by sweeping the holiday series with the Wildcats and the impressive Minnesota Gophers who will be here on Monday.

In the preliminary clash at 7 p. m. the Delaware and Hudson five will meet the General Accounting Office.

Stanford Eleven Banks On Speed, Deception

Coast Grid Circles Having Difficulty Visualizing Cornhuskers; Indians Brush Up On Sleight-of-Hand; Standlee Not Bothered

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 27.—Stanford's football team, it appears, will bank on its speed and deception against Nebraska's weight, age and experience, in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day.

Since a Nebraska outfit never has played in California, many observers are having a difficult time visualizing the Cornhuskers, but scout reports say they closely resemble a battering ram wound up for 60 minutes of battering, mixing in sharp reverses to either side and a very capable aerial game.

Stanford, with its highly diverting and highly publicized T-formation, combines speed with more speed, the idea being that when Quarterback Albert takes the ball from the center he can do one of several things with it, and quickly.

Sleight-of-Hand

Some of the professional observers have candidly admitted Frankie's sleight-of-hand was too much for them. He seemed to play the old shell game, because the ball turned up across the enemy goal line by so many surprising routes.

Critics who have seen Maj. Biff Jones' Huskers say they look rangier than the Stanfords, and possibly will have a pound or two weight advantage, man for man.

In the experience department, here are the facts: Nebraska's first team numbers eight seniors and three juniors. Stanford has three seniors, four juniors and four sophomores—and those four sophomores are in the cardinal line.

The Indians, blessed with additional perfect weather, got down to more serious drills today after a brief vacation and let down for the holidays. Milt Vucinich, the No. 2 fullback, continued to hobble about with a stiff knee, but big Standlee, the starting line smasher, seemed not to be bothered with his ankle handicap.

Brewers Sell Bloom, Center, To Baltimore

Goldfadden at Pivot Post Tonight; Deal For Pelkington Fails

Mike Bloom, 6-foot-6-inch center of Chris Heurich's basketball Brewers, yesterday was sold outright to the Baltimore Clippers, of the American Basketball League, in an unexpected move.

Bloom was scheduled to report with the Clippers last night and to play his first game with Baltimore last night.

As a result of the sale of Bloom, the Brewers are to use Ben Goldfadden, former George Washington University star, at the pivot tonight when they meet the champion Philadelphia Sphas in a game involving the American League's lead in the ballroom of the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia, at 9 o'clock.

Tomorrow night the Brewers are to play the New York Jewels in New York and return to Riverside next Wednesday night (New Year's) for another game with the Jewels at 9:30 o'clock.

The passing of Bloom occasioned considerable surprise inasmuch as the Brewers previously had failed to land John Pelkington, 6-foot-7-inch center of the Akron Goodyears, after having met Pelkington's terms. The beg fellow, after much deliberation decided to remain with the Akron Club, of the National Professional Basketball League.

Recreation Collegians Bow to Rens; Victors Break Early Tie

By Ed Lauson

Leading after a first-minute tie, the Renaissance five last night defeated the Recreation Collegians on the Banneker Court, 41-37, before a crowd of 1,400.

Puggy Bell, Pop Gates and Zack Clayton did most of the early scoring for the visitors, while Red Cooper and Willie Wynne were counting for the collegians, with the assistance of the elongated Tom Reid. The score stood 25-16 at the half.

Supe Henley opened the second half with a brace of foul shots, and Watts scored with a looper from center, to close the gap, but the Rens drew away rapidly, and with ease, when threatened, giving the ball to Sidat-Singh, who scored seven points in rapid succession.

With the count 38-24, they slowed down, refused their chances to count, and gave the crowd an exhibition of clever passing. Bruiser Saitch came into the game in the final five minutes to lead the passing game.

Gates, who made 19 points for the Rens without effort on his part, refused enough shots to have made double the count. Red Cooper, former Hampton, Va., star, was the high scorer for the Rens, with 11 points.

As a result of the sale of Bloom, the Brewers are to use Ben Goldfadden, former George Washington University star, at the pivot tonight when they meet the champion Philadelphia Sphas in a game involving the American League's lead in the ballroom of the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia, at 9 o'clock.

Tomorrow night the Brewers are to play the New York Jewels in New York and return to Riverside next Wednesday night (New Year's) for another game with the Jewels at 9:30 o'clock.

The passing of Bloom occasioned considerable surprise inasmuch as the Brewers previously had failed to land John Pelkington, 6-foot-7-inch center of the Akron Goodyears, after having met Pelkington's terms. The beg fellow, after much deliberation decided to remain with the Akron Club, of the National Professional Basketball League.

Yale Cagers Bow

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP).—Loyola's basketball team rallied for 12 successive points midway in the second half and then withstood a Yale assault to defeat the Easterners, 34 to 31, at the Coliseum tonight.

Hank Greenberg To Visit Honolulu, Then Spring Camp

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 27.—Hank Greenberg, the Detroit Tigers' hitting star, left his New York home for the club's Florida training base today—by way of Honolulu.

He headed west for California and after that will take a vacation on the Pacific Coast before reporting for spring training at Lakeland, Fla., in March.

The big outfielder said he had not put on much weight during the off-season and would be in good condition when the spring work began.

of water 2 inches deep, while one ran interference for the other with a big, black umbrella.

When all this had been done Coach Hagerty had his managers shoo all outsiders from the premises which, in February becomes the spring training base of the Philadelphia Nationals baseball team. Then practice was opened with a brief calisthenics drill which, it appeared, was enough to tire the average player.

After that Coach "Mush" Dubofsky herded together his guards and tackles at one end of the field for charging practice, while Coaches Hagerty and George Murtagh directed the centers, ends and backs in a passing drill. First one group would take the offensive and then the other, while Hagerty experimented with several new plays devised to test Mississippi State's aerial defense.

Koshlap, Jack Spencer, Jim Cartiglia, Lou Ghecas and Benny Bulvin did most of the heaving, with the fleet Jack Doolan, Dave Wiley, Al Lujack, Chris Pavich and John Lascari on the receiving end. From this opening drill it appeared as though the lanky Doolan, a former interscholastic sprint champion, will play a prominent role in Georgetown's passing attack on New Year's Day. A sprinter capable of zipping the 100 in 0:9.7, Doolan is practically impossible to cover on a long pass, and Hagerty can be expected to utilize his speed to the utmost.

Georgetown will continue its one-a-day afternoon practice schedule until New Year's Day. Mornings will be free for the players who will be taken on sightseeing trips to Hialeah race track, Seminole Village and other chief spots of interest in the vicinity.

Idaho Champions Battle to a Draw With L. S. U. Boxers

New Orleans, Dec. 27 (AP).—Idaho, National intercollegiate boxing champion, and Louisiana State, leader of the Southeastern Conference, fought to a 4-4 draw in the annual Sugar Bowl matches tonight before about 3,000 fans.

The heavyweight division produced the only knockout. Herbert Kendrick, L. S. U. star, put Vic Berllus down for a nine count in the first round and a few seconds later floored him again. The referee then halted the bout.

Hayes Five Triumphs in Boys' Tourney

High-Scoring Games Mark Play; B.-C.C. Defeats Georgetown

High scoring marked the four games in the annual Christmas basketball tournament of the Boys Club of Washington yesterday as the four semifinal opponents in the 135-pound class were decided.

Hayes A. C.'s quint was the hardest pressed in a nip-and-tuck battle with Alexandria B. C., coming from behind at the half to register a 39-to-36 victory. B. Holland and the Loube brothers paced the attack with 25 of their team's 39 points.

Today Hayes will stack up at 7:30 p. m. against Merrick Boys Club, which earned the semifinal with a smashing 55-to-26 beating of Paul Recreation. Nine players contributed to the winners' margin.

The other semifinal at 6:30 will bring together Bethesda-Chevy Chase, which trounced Georgetown, 44 to 25, and Central Branch Fleetwings, who nosed out the Eastern B. C. Rens, 21 to 15. Both games will be at Eastern Branch.

A 120-pound clash at Central Branch at 6:30 p. m. will feature Central Americans against Alexandria B. C.

Georgia Tech And California Battle Today

Jackets Are Badly Battered for Game With Coast Rivals

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Dec. 27.—Georgia Tech's badly battered Yellow Jackets, winners of only two games this season, go up against University of California tomorrow in the sixth renewal of a rivalry which started in the Rose Bowl of 1929.

For Tech it will be a chance to salvage something from the season's wreckage, and even the series with the Golden Bears, which now stands three wins to two in favor of California. Tech won the first encounter, capitalizing on Roy Riegels' famous "backward run" to beat the Bears, 8-7.

Both squads were expected to go into the game near full strength, Coach Stub Allison, of California, indicating he will use his sophomore backfield ace, Jim Jurkovich, who was injured during the regular season, and Guard Charlie Donohue, downed recently with an attack of influenza. Coach W. A. Alexander, of Tech, was expected to start his midget halfback, Johnny Bosch, and End Bob Ison, who was hindered by injuries during much of the regular season.

Uncertain weather was indicated. Each team worked out briefly today beneath overcast skies.

Sacred Heart Five Beaten In Upset, 20-17

St. Matthew's Winner Over Favored Foes In Parochial Meet

The annual parochial basketball tournament came through its third round yesterday at Gonzaga High gym, with St. Matthew's five accounting for the biggest upset of the day by beating smooth-working Sacred Heart, 20-17. Gleiner's eight points paced the winners.

Lanky Center O'Donnell, who started his tourney efforts with a 16-point performance last Sunday, came through with 15 more points yesterday as St. Thomas hung a 29-8 shellacking on the cagers of St. James. The closest triumph of the day went to Holy Name, 15-13, over Blessed Sacrament.

Other winners were St. Aloysius over Immaculate Conception, 17-12; St. Martin's over St. Stephen's, 27-13, and Holy Comforter over St. Joseph's, 25-8. The next round will be played Sunday at Gonzaga, starting at 1 p. m.

Adams Hats Faces Heavy Cage Schedule

League-Leading Teams In Three Games in as Many Days at Heurich

Though it holds a 1½-game lead in the Heurich Amateur Basketball League following a victory over its closest competitor, Regal Clothiers, Adam Hats five will be hard pressed during the next few days to clinch first-half honors.

It starts a three-game program at the Heurich gym tomorrow in a meeting with the improved Alexandria Police. Monday it faces United Clay and on New Year's Day tangles with Petworth A. C. The only foe with almost no chance of winning will be the last-place Claymen.

Bowl Game Odds Again Shift; G.U. Is 2-1 Underdog

By International News Service

New York, Dec. 27.—Broadway bookies tonight reported heavy betting has caused a shift in odds in four Bowl games and the East-West charity contest in San Francisco on New Year's Day. The latest prices were:

Stanford a 2-to-5 favorite over Nebraska in the Rose Bowl; Tennessee, 1 to 2 over Boston College in the Sugar Bowl; Texas A. & M., 2 to 5 over Fordham in the Cotton Bowl; Mississippi State, 1 to 2 over Georgetown in the Orange Bowl, and the Eastern All-Stars, 1 to 2 over the Western All-Stars.

Ice-Capades Open Jan. 28 At New Arena

The "Ice-Capades of 1941," new ice revue, will open the new Uline Ice Arena January 28, and will run through a 13-day engagement covering 15 performances, it was announced yesterday by Michael J. Uline, owner of Washington's largest indoor arena, nearing completion at Third and M Streets Northeast.

Featuring Belita, sensational English wizard; Vera Hruba, beauteous Czecho-Slovakian, and Lois Dworshak, jitterbug rhythm girl of the ice, the "Ice-Capades" include an internationally famous cast of 75, also starring comedian Eric Waite, recently returned from a command performence before King George VI of England; Joe Jackson, jr., and Al Surrette. Waite is the comedy artist who scored so sensationally here last spring with the locally produced Washington Ice Carnival.

Modeled after the Hershey (Pa.) plant, the new Uline Arena will have a seating capacity of approximately 6,000 spectators, every seat offering an unobstructed view of the entire floor space, unmarred by poles or girders, and has been pronounced as one of the finest rinks in the country by arena managers of other cities who have examined the blueprints.

The new arena will have the largest ice surface of any in the country, measuring 225 by 120 feet, and will feature the Vedder system of ice-freezing, with the brine by-pass running directly from the ajacent Uline ice plant.

Americans, Bruins Play Overtime Tie

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Hooley Smith, New York Americans veteran now in his seventeenth National Hockey League season, scored a clever goal with less than 2 minutes of regular time to go and earned his team a 3-3 overtime tie with the Boston Bruins tonight before 10,590 fans.

Cornhuskers Given 2 Drills by Jones

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 27 (AP).—Coach Biff Jones, who apparently doesn't agree with members of his squad that they have reached top form, worked them harder than ever today in preparation for the Rose Bowl.

The Cornhuskers were out for light practice in sweat clothes during the morning and returned to the field after lunch for scrimmages on both offensive and defensive plays.

Jones, indicating that he believes his players should show still greater improvement before their New Year's Day battle against Stanford University, said two workouts likely would be held again tomorrow.

The wily mentor, known for his thoroughness, hopes to get all heavy training done before leaving for Pasadena tomorrow night.

Observers accompanying the Nebraskans expressed the belief again today that the second stringers looked better than the regulars on defense against the "T" formation which Stanford employs, and they believed it possible the second squad would get the defense assignment.

California 'Dew' Halts Golden Gate Turf Club Opening

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 27.—Opening of the new ultra modern Golden Gate Turf Club at Albany, set for tomorrow, was postponed today until January 4 on orders from the California Horse Racing Commission, which described the track as "unsuitable" due to heavy rains.

A gala opening had been planned for the racing plant, which embraces innovations not to be found at any track in the country. Its three-tiered combination grandstand and exclusive turf club features finish line positions for the lowest to the highest priced seats. Club windows look out over San Francisco Bay.

Georgetown's Great Line Play Overlooked by South's Scribes

Hoya, Hoya, Grapefruit:

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 27.—Georgetown University, here for the Orange Bowl game, is making only its second football invasion of the South in the school's 67-year football history . . . Only other time the Hoyas played here was in 1936 when they lost to University of Miami by 19-7 . . . Much publicity is being given to the fact that Mississippi State's regular line hasn't yielded a touchdown in two years . . . But so far it has escaped local writers that Georgetown's line also has a great record . . . The Hoya forward wall has surrendered only four touchdowns in three years, and two of them were tainted inasmuch as a pass and a penalty put the ball on G. U.'s one-yard line . . . The teams to score through Georgetown's line since 1937 were Manhattan which bucked over from the four-yard line in a game won by G. U. 14-13; Waynesboro which tallied at the end of an 85-yard drive; Syracuse which scored from the one-yard line on its fourth try after a pass had placed the ball at that point, and Boston college which also pushed over from the one-yard line after getting there on an interference penalty. . .

With the Georgetown team are the wives of Coach Jack Hagerty and Graduate Manager of Athletics H. Gabriel Murphy and several rabid rooters . . . Among these are Rome Schwagel, a former Georgetown director of sports publicity; Mike Donato, a Paterson, N. J., lawyer who played baseball at Georgetown a few years ago; Frank Geiger, a Newark, N. J., business man, whom Coach Jack Hagerty described as "his handy man"; "Art" Artgauer, coach of Garfield (N. J.) High School which, incidentally, has lost only one of its last 31 games, and Charley O'Connell, the Washington, D. C. insurance salesman who also works at Griffith Stadium . . . Also here to root for Georgetown are Paul Orloski and George McGurne, both lawyers for the Veterans Bureau in Washington, and Dr. Greeves, a District dentist . . . By game time more than 1,000 G. U. students, alumni and friends are expected here, some from as far West as Chicago . . . Bill Shea, president of the New York City Alumni Chapter, will head a contingent of about 80. "Mush" Dubofsky, the big, rough and tough, but sentimental Georgetown line coach, is carrying around in his pocket a pony-sized horseshoe . . . Who said the Civil War was over? . . . This year's Orange Bowl game will really be a battle between the North and South . . . All but one of Georgetown's squad of 34 are from North of Washington.

All but three of Mississippi State's 29 boys are from South of the Mason-Dixon line . . . Earl Fullilove (who won't be that way for Mississippi State), suh, is the lone Georgetown player from the land of fried chicken, yams and black-eyed peas . . . Fullilove, by the way, passed up offers from Alabama, Tennessee and L. S. U. to go to Georgetown . . . Judge James Dunn, a Georgetown alumnus and one of Miami's leading citizens is an especial booster for Al Blozis . . .

JACK MUNHALL.

The boy stands more than 6 feet and weighs 210, and they tell me he can punch. I hope that through him, and Joe, and Mike, I can answer a little crippled lad who used to come to my church. He hobbled past it the morning after it burned and he cried, 'My church is burned, and I'll never have another one.'

The Louis fight would be held in the local auditorium, where Louis knocked out Natie Brown some time ago before a $23,000 house.

"Novak's only had nine pro fights . . . won eight of them by kayos," Gabe Kaufman, the veteran Kansas City promoter told us. "But he had more than a hundred amateur fights. He was National A. A. U. heavyweight champion in 1939. He's only 21 and he'll knock Louis out if he can tag him, and I think he can. He's the hardest hitter they ever saw around this section of the country. He's no swinger, either, like a lot of local prides. He throws those short ones and he can take it."

Peoria, Ill., Dec. 27 (AP).—Bradley performed almost flawlessly tonight to swamp Cornell University's basketball team, 52 to 32.

Hitting the baskets from every angle of the floor, Bradley came through the first half with a 32-to-13 lead. It was Bradley's fourth win against two defeats.

Telephone Net Off $31,740 In November

Gain in Operating Revenues Erased By Cost Jump

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co yesterday reported net income of $117,465 in November, against $149,205 in the same 1939 month.

Although operating revenues in the month advanced to $1,146,616 (gain of $94,830 over same 1939 month), operating expenses were $877,732, as compared with $741,072 in November, 1939.

The telephone plant in service on November 30 was $3,914,560 more than on the same date last year, according to Charles A. Robinson, vice president and general manager.

For the 11 months of 1940, operating revenues were 8.77 per cent higher than the same period last year, while expenses, including taxes, were 9.67 per cent higher. Net income for the 11 months showed an increase of $15,736, or .95 per cent over last year, while the average plant in service showed an increase of $3,108,034, or 6.70 per cent.

Taxes in November amounted to $97,975, a decrease of $17,450 from November, 1939. For the 11 months of 1940, taxes amounted to $1,297,029, which is $169,073 more than for the same period in 1939, an increase of 14.99 per cent.

There were 272,552 telephones in service at the end of November, which was an increase of 2,871 telephones over the previous month. Telephone users made 33,887,850 calls during the months, or 3,391,223 more than in November, 1939.

Holiday Week Cuts Offerings To $14,984,439

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—The capital market observed the holiday this week, public offerings of new securities falling off to $14,984,439, smallest in 16 years, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today. The total was less than 7 per cent of the unusually big volume of the preceding week.

Municipal offerings accounted for most of the week's financing. Corporate issues were negligible.

Underwriting circles explained that new offerings usually were dull around the holidays and expected to pick up again very shortly.

Comparisons follow:

	This week	Year ago
Municipal	$10,046,000	$14,715,549
Public Utility		50,000
Industrial	1,500,000	4,069,000
Stock	3,438,439	31,200
Total	14,984,439	21,056,749

Week's Loadings Heavier Than '39

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 700,242 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 36,090 cars, or 4.9 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 48,850, or 7.5 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 126,044, or 22.0 per cent, compared with 1938.

All classes of freight declined, following the usual seasonal pattern. The decline, however, was slightly larger than usual for the week.

Commodity Futures

WOOL TOPS—Commission house and trade buying steadied wool top futures market throughout most of today's trading. There was some reaction near the close, however, and the market closed .1 lower to .2 higher. Spot tops, ¶119.0.

LMAD—Futures closed 3 to 6 higher. Sales, 180,000 pounds.

No sales in zinc and straits tin futures.

Retail Sales Up 8 to 16 Pct. During Week

Dun & Bradstreet Reports Decade's Best Level

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Business was described by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., today as "at the best level in a decade."

In its Weekly Trade Review, the mercantile agency said: "With striking increases over last year, retail trade is keeping pace with a record volume of production and the heaviest income flow since 1930.

"An outstanding feature of the comments received from various sections of the country this week is the stress on the wide distribution of the gains. All major shopping centers report some advance over the 1939 level of retail trade, with the Christmas period climaxed by an unexpectedly heavy splurge of last-minute buying.

"Although promotional emphasis dwindled sharply in the last few days, the heavy influx of shoppers continued to tax store capacity. In volume of goods moved, a number of cities found sales exceeding all previous records.

"As a rule, stocks held fairly well, although some retailers, particularly in rural areas, reported business lost because of inadequate selections. Items on which inventories ran low included nylon hosiery, metal toys, gloves, robes and mufflers.

"Retail sales increases over a year ago, which have been running at better than 6 per cent since the start of the Christmas shopping period, jumped to 8 to 16 per cent this week.

"Biggest gains occurred in industrial land in military-training centers, with the improvement most substantial on an average in the Middle West and South.

"Regional percentage increases compared with the 1939 week were estimated as follows: New England, 5 to 10; East, 7 to 15; Middle West, and South, 11 to 18; Southwest, 6 to 11; Northwest, 7 to 9; Pacific Coast, 4 to 10."

Boston Wool

Boston, Dec. 27 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—Few domestic wools were being offered on the Boston market today. Users generally were showing no interest in domestic and the few holders that had sizable quantities were not pushing sales. Nominal quotations on sizable lines of domestic wools were showing no change.

Tax-Selling Abates, Stocks Move Forward In Liveliest Trade in More Than a Month

By Frederick Gardner
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 27.—The stockmarket broke a week-long stalemate today as the briskest trading in more than a month sent prices into a mild year-end rally.

While the flurry was relatively short-lived and not all advantages were completely held, the final tally showed 374 issues ahead, 268 even and 284 down. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced .1 of a point to 43.2, but there was a fair scattering of gains running to major fractions.

Transfers, amounting to 1,272,710 shares, were last exceeded November 14. In the previous session turnover was only 838,362 shares.

As the session progressed buying spread. Brokers said the fact year-end tax selling had about been completed gave the bulls a break by removing the dribble of liquidation of recent days.

The earlier buying, which took several to new highs for a year or more, began with such specialties as Bath Iron Works, Timken-Detroit, New York Shipbuilding, Lima Locomotive, Electric Boat and National Acme. It spread later, especially to metal and aircrafts, though most other sections also had their representatives in the advancing column.

Steady to a point or so ahead were U. S. Steel, U. S. Rubber, Dupont, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Douglas, Consolidated Edison, Phelps Dodge, Kennecott, Anaconda, Chesapeake & Ohio, Johns Manville and U. S. Gypsum. Chrysler was a shade lower, along with General Electric, American Can and Union Carbide.

In the Curb market gainers included Aluminum, Ltd., Aluminum of America, American Cyanamid "B," American Light & Traction, Brewster and Gulf Oil. Volume, however, dropped to 320,000 shares, from 441,000 the previous day.

Cotton was a favorite among commodity futures with a gain of 30 to 50 cents a bale. Corn advanced ½ to ⅝ cent a bushel at Chicago but wheat was unchanged to ⅛ lower.

Year-end shifting of accounts helped to boost bond market volume to around the best levels of the year, but it also brought conflicting trends throughout the list.

Rail loans and a good-sized group of low yield issues drew a generous share of buying attention. Carrier bonds, like Southern Railway 4s, M-K-T first 4s of '90 and Erie General Lien 4s of '96 were bid up a point or more.

U. S. Governments had a prominent place in the prime investment division. Treasuries pushing up for gains running to 13/32ds of a point.

Court Orders Dissolution of Pierce Oil Corp.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 27 (AP).—Judge Julien Gunn, in City Circuit Court today, ordered the dissolution of the Pierce Oil Corporation.

The court's order did not restrict the powers of Henry C. Riely and Robert T. Barton, jr., receivers, who are engaged in a settlement of the corporation's affairs. Judge Gunn held that the corporation had failed in the purpose for which it was formed, and by reason of limited resources and credit, it is impossible for it to fulfill its purpose or to engage in the oil business again.

The receivers were authorized to continue the prosecution of a suit pending in United States District Court for the Southern District of New York for the recovery of $177,000 in excess interest alleged to have been paid in settlement of United States income, excess profits and war tax of the Pierce Oil Corporation for 1918-20.

Listen! with Glynn

Ted Husing, CBS's star sports reporter, is to give WJSV listeners the lowdown on the Mississippi State football team which meets the Georgetown University squad at Miami's Orange Bowl game on New Year's Day, in a special broadcast from Miami at 3:45 this afternoon.

Ted is to follow the Mississippi Bulldogs through a practice drill in the stadium and he plans after that to bring some of the team members to the microphone to give their thoughts on the subject of the game.

The manifold activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, more often known as the FBI, in protecting the nation's gigantic defense program, are to be unfolded in "Report to the Nation" over WJSV at 6. With billions of dollars being spent on defense and with hundreds of thousands of young men being trained, how the FBI is going about safeguarding this huge investment by registration of aliens and foreign agents is to be told in dramatic form. Albert Warner and John Charles Daly are to serve as commentators and a large cast of local actors, directed by Brewster Morgan, is to take part in the dramatization which originates in the studios of WJSV.

And, speaking of commentators reminds me of Elmer Davis's rather wistful comeback in answer to an interviewer's question the other day. Said the interviewer after a flood of personal questions: "What's your nickname?" Said Elmer: "And what would I need a nickname for when I've already got Elmer?"

Contract Bridge

At least one declarer managed to extricate herself from a hopelessly blocked situation and win her small-slam bid on today's hand. She was Olive Peterson, of Philadelphia, and the deal, which looks like a setup, was actually played during a duplicate tournament. Most declarers tried to establish a squeeze and went down one when good defense took two diamonds, but Mrs. Peterson found a way to use dummy's trumps as entries and she reached the North hand to toss off her two losing diamonds on the king of hearts and clubs. This is how she did it:

As at most tables, West led the four of hearts, the singleton ace in the South hand winning. Declarer next played the ace of clubs and then the deuce of trumps, overtaking with dummy's six. The eight of trumps won, but dummy's second spade was developed for an entry, and after winning the return lead of the jack of diamonds with the ace, Mrs. Peterson played the spade five to North's seven and threw off the diamond queen and four on the king of hearts and clubs. She made six spades, losing one trump trick.

The eight of spades might be singleton, of course, and fall under the play of an honor, but this would be a needless risk to take when by simply giving up a spade trick the contract is assured.

2 at Ft. Meade Among Donors To Neediest

Total of $168 Given In Day; More Than 80 Families to Benefit

"Jimmie and Andrew" at Fort Meade sent $1 yesterday to The Post's Neediest Families Fund, and another person sent $100. Mrs. Mary D. King sent $5 "from two small children, to be used, if possible, for children," and still others sent contributions, so that a total of $186 was received early in the day.

These gifts brought the total contributed to the fund to $8,173.55—which means that still more of the District's neediest families can be given emergency assistance, and as a result can be made once more self-supporting early in the New Year.

Help for 50 families was asked originally. Now the number has grown through voluntary responses of Post readers to more than 80.

The families selected were those who were not eligible for public assistance because they had an employable member, even though at the time he or she was jobless. They were those, also, for whom no funds were available in the resources of various welfare and philanthropic institutions in the District, because of the already great load on those funds.

Those from whom assistance came yesterday to help these families, were:

Best-Dressed Wife? Legare's 'Not Interested'

Husband Seems Unimpressed in Her Hour of Triumph

Mrs. S. Kent Legare, Washington society leader, may be one of the world's best dressed women (she was so named Thursday by noted style experts), but her sportsman husband is definitely "not interested."

Legare was called yesterday at his home, 2343 S Street Northwest, and asked how it felt to be the husband of a "best dressed" woman.

In no uncertain fashion he said: "I don't know anything about it, I don't want to talk about it and I don't want to hear anymore about it. What's more, I'm not interested."

He declined comment on his preference in colors, dress designs and hat shapes—standing emphatically on the "not interested" statement.

Mrs. Legare, one of society's most handsome matrons, was selected as one of the 15 best dressed women in the world by a board of foremost designers. She has long been known as a fashion leader here. She has a flare for French creations.

Princeton Youth, Hit-Run Victim, Is Recovering

Albert Van Court, jr., 21, Princeton Triangle Club member, who was struck by a hit-run motorist Christmas morning, was described as "better," although not yet out of danger, at Emergency Hospital last night.

The youth, who suffered a concussion, and Miss Betty Dunbar Drayton, of 4625 Garfield Street Northwest, were felled at Wisconsin and Massachusetts avenues Northwest, after attending midnight services at Washington Cathedral. Miss Drayton suffered only minor injuries.

Van Court's physician, Dr. William Marbury, said the former's father, Albert Van Court, Los Angeles investment banker, and Mrs. Van Court were expected to arrive here today.

Last Rites Today For John J. Luddy, D. C. Newsman

Funeral rites for John J. Luddy, 46, Washington newspaperman, who died Tuesday, will be at 10 a. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

A native of Montana, Mr. Luddy came to this city after serving in the World War. He worked on the Washington Times at one time as news editor, and later was employed at The Washington Post and the Washington Herald.

Mr. Luddy recently had been discharged from Mount Alto Hospital after a year's illness. He made his home at 1807 California Street Northwest.

He leaves his wife and a son, John J., jr.

Bar Committee Named to Study Full-Time Traffic Judge

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

A special committee of the District of Columbia Bar Association has been named to study the question of providing Washington with a permanent traffic court with a full-time judge, Francis W. Hill, jr., president, announced yesterday.

He appointed John Carmody chairman of the group and called for a thorough investigation. The committee was instructed to report its findings to the association at the earliest possible date.

"This is an imporant matter which I feel merits immediate attention of the D. C. Bar Association," said Hill. "We have been making a study of Police Court procedure, but heretofore have not touched this particular phase of the subject."

Hill, a Police Court prosecutor from 1920 to 1922, was of the opinion that a full-time traffic judge would not be necessary if the four present jurists should agree to extend their working hours and to handle major traffic cases when routine business of the other courts is finished for the day.

Young Proposes Hearing

"It might be well," said Hill, "to have an assignment commissioner, as in District Court, who could keep track of pending jury traffic cases and notify the judges which cases are ready for trial at the end of regular court sessions every day."

By this method, Hill said, dockets could be cleared quickly without the necessity of seeking legislation for an additional judge to be assigned full time in Traffic Court.

Meanwhile, Commissioner J. Russell Young joined Commissioner David McCoach, jr., in suggesting a frank discussion of the subject with the four Police Court judges. He said he would go further and ask for a public hearing and invite all interested parties to participate.

Commissioner Young said he would propose the hearing immediately after the first of the year.

"I have an open mind on this question," he said, "and would like to hear both sides before expressing an opinion one way or another."

The Commissioner, however, said he felt curret proposals for establishment of a "specialized" traffic court had "considerable merit." The present discussion, Young added, had sufficiently aroused his interest in the possibilities of creating a permanent court for traffic that he "wanted to know a lot more about it."

The proposal for a public hearing was indorsed by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, who said that he felt the time had come for all parties concerned "to get together and decide something one way or another."

The Commissioners have before them recommendations of the Traffic Advisory Council to amend a bill by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, providing Police Court with an extra judge, so that two members of the bench could be assigned full time to traffic matters.

Schulte Bill Tabled

Both Commissioners Young and McCoach indicated no action will be taken on the council's recommendations until after the proposed hearing.

The Schulte bill, introduced last April, was tabled in the House District Committee principally because of opposition from three of the four Police Court judges.

P. Y. K. Howat, chairman of the Board of Trade traffic committee, who has been a leader in efforts to obtain a full-time traffic judge, said he would be willing to have his whole committee appear at the proposed hearing if necessary.

"I think much could be accomplished by all of us getting together in this matter, and I am certain we can convince the Commissioners that a permanent Traffic Court judge is urgently needed in Washington," he said.
